MR. MERCHANT, the public has been harangued too long. Its ears are jangling, its eyes are weary with following wild gestures of inexperienced, amateur adv. writers. Its intelligence has been insulted too often, its credulity stretched too far. Readers turn with relief to my low-voiced, moderate, non-exaggerated advertisements, booklets, circulars, business letters, etc., because they appeal to reason. The public weighs words carefully, and the balance swings toward the more solid ones. Let me show you the "difference" in advertising. Terms reasonable. George M. Zellmer, care of Kingston Freeman.

TWO CHICKEN THIEVES ESCAPE FROM COUNTY JAIL

Arthur Ellsworth and Edward DeNike, With Only 25 Days to Serve, Break Coal Bin Lock and Get Out of Jail Early This Morning.

Some time between midnight and five o'clock this morning Arthur Ellsworth and Edward DeNike, two chicken thieves, made their escape from the cellar under the county jail by breaking the large Yale lock on the cellar door of the coal bin with the grate shaker of the large furnace. Both men had about twenty-five more days to serve of a four months' sentence in the jail imposed by Recorder Grogan for stealing chickens.

Ellsworth and DeNike were both trusties who did the cooking for the other prisoners in the county jail, and as trusties were allowed to sleep in a large room in the cellar off the kitchen which had been fitted up as a bedroom.

At eight o'clock Wednesday evening Jailer Isaac Doyle made his rounds of the jail and locked up the prisoners and going down cellar he saw to it that the windows and the cellar doors were securely locked. Shortly before midnight Mr. Doyle made another inspection before retiring and found that every one was accounted for.

Some time during the night the two trusties got up and dressed themselves and left their bedroom and got out into the cellar. They, of course, found the door of the coal bin locked and hunted around for some article to break the lock. They picked up the grate shaker and attacked the lock which soon gave way before the heavy blows. Swinging open the door of the coal bin they slipped out into the jail yard and made their escape.

At five o'clock this morning, when Jailer Doyle made his rounds, he found that both trusties were missing and a general alarm has been sent out for their apprehension.

From time immemorial it has been the custom to allow trusties to sleep in the cellar, and as Ellsworth and DeNike had only a few more days to serve it was not thought they would attempt to make an escape.

As is well known no prisoners who are held to await the action of the grand jury or those who are held awaiting trial in county court are made trusties, and only prisoners who are serving time for minor offences are so treated.

WAR CLOUDS LOOM DARKER THAN EVER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, May 21.—With the execution of Private Parks at Vera Cruz now accepted as a certainty and hope for the safety of Vice Consul John R. Silliman practically abandoned, military officials in Washington with a propensity for dallying with chance today were offering to bet two to one against the successful issue of the mediation conferences at Niagara Falls. Intervention by the United States was quoted in some circles at even money.

Victoriano Huerta's emphatic statement that he will not resign the provisional presidency, has strengthened the belief here that the present status is more than likely to undergo a sudden change for the worse and that the peace negotiations probably will be wrecked on the first proposal submitted to the parties concerned. Diplomats and army and navy officers in Washington are united in the belief that hostilities must come eventually.

The administration's strictly enforced censorship of the news of the Mexican situation is viewed by many as part of the program to keep the country's war plans entirely secret until it becomes necessary through the failure of mediation or some further aggressive act on the part of a dictator to bring Huerta to a final reckoning. The government, it is known, is ready to throw an army of invasion into Mexico. Confidential reports from government agents in Mexico are believed to have convinced President Wilson that to permit the rebels to have full sway in Mexico after they defeat Huerta would be an offense against humanity. This is a popular opinion here, notwithstanding reports that the U. S. is giving moral support to Carranza. Present countenance of the rebels is regarded in some official circles as part of the diplomatic game this country is playing to stave off actual war as long as possible.

The belief that mediation is not likely to cure Mexico's ills today was voiced by Dr. Levi B. Salmans, a medical missionary in Mexico for nearly 30 years under the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions. Dr. Salmans, who has just come from Guanajuato, said:

"The policy of mediation has somewhat relieved the irritation by indicating to the Mexicans that we are ready to act fairly. It will not, however, influence Huerta to resign from the presidency nor coerce the rebel leaders into offering a truce to the dictator. The warring factions can hardly be expected to reach a mutual agreement and set up a united government for the country unless help comes from the outside.

"Many Mexicans are not unfavorably disposed to American intervention, because they realize that the object of such intervention is not to exploit, but to help."

More Stolen Goods Found.

More of the booty stolen from Judge Bird's house in Tarrytown on Sunday was found in Newburgh on Wednesday by Roundsman Dickey at the store of R. H. Gorrie, where it had been sold for old gold. The boys, Walter McCabe and Fred Anderson, who were arrested here by Sergeant Murray, admitted they had sold some of the stuff in Newburgh and Poughkeepsie. In the lot sold to Mr. Corrie was discovered a pin which had been stolen in Poughkeepsie.

SUFFRAGETTE RIOT AT BUCKINGHAM

Mrs. Pankhurst Arrested While Leading the Suffragette Army, Whereupon the Women Attempt to Mob the Police and are Beaten Up.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, May 21.—While leading an army of women upon Buckingham Palace, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militant suffragettes, was arrested this afternoon. Immediately after King George and Queen Mary arrived from Aldershot, where they have been for five days inspecting the great military establishment, the women gathered at Whitehall and moved toward Buckingham Palace. They sent word ahead demanding a personal interview with the king, while a petition had been prepared for presentation to the queen.

Their majesties, however, had stolen a march upon the suffragettes, for instead of going direct to Buckingham Palace upon their arrival, they went to the Marlborough House, the residence of Dowager Queen Alexandra.

More than 2,000 policemen, detectives and soldiers were on duty in the streets and around the palace to prevent rioting. Home Secretary McKenna had sent word to the leaders of the women that King George would not receive them under any circumstances but this did not deter them.

"If he won't see us we will see him," was the reply sent back to the home secretary.

As the army of women was moving along Constitution Hill, two policemen suddenly seized Mrs. Pankhurst and hurried her off to the police station. Mrs. Pankhurst's body guard of husky women, chosen for their courage and strength, gave an angry shout and attacked the policemen, but they were dispersed with dishevelled hair and torn dresses.

The palace grounds were carefully searched for the fear prevailed that fanatics among the women might attempt to do the king bodily harm.

Following the arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst, a riot broke out on Constitution Hill. Mounted police tried to clear the streets but the women formed themselves into a compact mob and fought savagely. The mounted police charged with the mass of femininity, smashing at the heads of the leaders with their heavy police batons. The yells of the enraged women drowned out the thuds of the truncheons as they fell with crushing force upon the heads and shoulders of the women.

Many women were knocked down and trampled. Some lay unconscious while the battle raged above their prostrate bodies. Others were trampled by horses and carried insensible to the hospitals. Snorting, rearing horses, maddened by the tumult, dashed into the fringe of the mob, scattering women right and left. Some of the women had their clothing almost wholly torn from their bodies. Others with flying hair and bloodstained faces fought like Amazons, hurling missiles and shrieking imprecations at the police.

The weapons of the mob were broken bottles, stones, rotten eggs, bombs filled with paint, and clubs.

Ambulances and police reserves were rushed to the scene and the injured were cared for outside the battle zone. The most strenuous of the women had to be strapped to their cots as they insisted upon going back into the fight when they regained consciousness.

Screaming in their blind rage the women threw chairs through the windows, hurled bottles of ink against the walls, tore up police records and overturned tables, in the station house.

While the battle raged on Constitution Hill and around the Palace grounds, members of the royal household mounted the towers of Buckingham Palace and watched the fray.

Spread out beneath them lay the scene of tumult in the streets. They saw the police charge time and again and the yells of the maddened women rose clear and strong to their ears. Above the tossing sea of waving arms and heads the watchers could make out the forms of the mounted policemen, riding through the outer ranks of the mob, the arms of the policemen rythmically rising and falling as they brought down their clubs upon the heads of the suffragettes. It was the worst suffragette riot London has ever known.

Within half an hour forty women were placed under arrest charged with assaulting policemen, rioting, inciting to riot, impairing traffic, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct.

Around the palace grounds sentries from the Scots Greys, the Imperial Household troops stood at attention or rested upon their carbines as they looked upon the battle before them.

The women, adopting military strategy kept compactly together in the middle of the streets, making it difficult for the policemen to segregate the mobs. Flying missles crashed through the windows of buildings adjoining the streets and the crash of shattered glass mingled with the shouts of the fighters.

Suddenly some one started up the anthem of the militant suffragettes and the women all joined.

Mean Insinuation.

Woman (excited and dishevelled)—"Quick! Give me a glass of brandy for a woman in a fit." Druggist (calmly)—"Yes, madam. To drink now or to take away with you?"—London Opinion.

LOST LIFE IN DEFENDING VALUABLES FROM THIEVES

Eugene Houghtaling, West Shore Station Agent at Tappan, Murdered by Burglars Who Sought to Loot the Station Safe and Were Prevented by His Brave Resistance.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Tappan, N. Y., May 21.—While heroically defending the property of his employers, Eugene Houghtaling, the young agent for the West Shore Railroad at this place, was shot to death today by two robbers who escaped with $18. Thousands of dollars' worth of gems and $500 in cash were in the safe and in the post office safe in the same building was a great quantity of stamps and specie, but the thieves became frightened and fled before they could secure all the booty.

William Forest, who lives across the street from the railway station, was aroused by the shooting and reached the street just in time to see the two men fleeing from he building. He fired upon them, but without effect.

Houghtaling was passing his lonely early morning vigil by talking on the telegraph wire with the station agent at Haverstraw, thirteen miles away, when the two robbers entered the station.

"Robbers are trying to get into my office," flashed Houghtaling on the wire.

"Quit your kidding," came the word from Haverstraw.

The men suspected that Houghtaling was telegraphing for aid apparently, and ordered him to stop. The young agent began rapping with his telegraph key again and the man at Haverstraw caught this message:

"For God's sake send help; they are going to shoot. Send—"

The message was broken off there. The interior of the office showed that Houghtaling had put up a struggle even after he was wounded.

Eugene Houghtaling, who was attacked and killed at Tappan early this morning, was a brother of Herbert Houghtaling of No. 198 Main street, this city. He was the youngest of three brothers, all of whom engaged in railroad work. He was born at New Baltimore, where his father and mother are now living, and he is survived by them and two brothers, Herbert Houghtaling and George Houghtaling. He was unmarried. Herbert Houghtaling went to Tappan on an early train this morning. He is general agent at the freight and passenger depot of the Ulster & Delaware Railroad at Rondout and has been connected with that road for several years. He was formerly freight agent of the West Shore Railroad in this city and before that was agent at New Baltimore.

BIGGEST SHIP REACHES NEW YORK

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 21.—The new Hamburg-American liner, Vaterland, the greatest ship afloat, arrived here today from Hamburg, Cherbourg and Southampton on her maiden voyage. She brought 270 first class passengers, 142 second cabin passengers and 355 third class passengers, and 910 in the steerage. As there are 1,281 persons in the crew, the total of human souls on board the leviathan was 2,958.

The steamer made an average run of about 24 miles an hour. On board her were the directors of the line. The day's runs were 421, 578, 562, 580, 594 and 442 knots.

Dock Commissioner Smith went to Quarantine and boarded the steamer in response to an invitation to inspect the giantess.

The Vaterland is a sister ship of the Imperator. The immensity of her measurements are shown by the following figures: Tonnage, 58,000; length, 950 feet; beam (width) 100 feet; horse power, 65,000; speed, 25 knots an hour.

In addition to being the last word in luxury the Vaterland was constructed to be unsinkable. Her bulkheads are of steel and she has two "skins" so that if the outer hull is punctured the water will be kept out of the hold by the inner wall. In addition to being unsinkable the Vaterland is fire proof.

The big ship was decorated with flags as she slowly steamed up the bay and her siren occasionally answered the chorus of whistles and fog horn bursts that welcomed the new liner.

The cargo consisted of 2,316 barrels, of which 2,066 was beer and the balance salt.

Among the passengers were the Right Hon. Alexander Carlisle, designer of the Titanic; Admiral Oscar Von Trupel, German navy; ex-United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich and Edgar Allen Forbes, the author.

ARMY TO PROTECT BRITISH ROYALTY

Militant Suffragettes Were the Cause of Extraordinary Precautions Being Taken to Protect the King and Queen on Their Journey.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, May 21.—Two thousand policemen and armed soldiers protected King George and Queen Mary from suffragettes today when they returned from Aldershot to Buckingham Palace. Their Majesties, who have spent five days upon a trip of informal inspection to England's great military establishment at Aldershot, returned by automobile.

Warning had been given out that militant suffragettes would attempt to secure an interview with King George and that they would present a petition from working women to Queen Mary. This warning resulted in the strongest precautions being taken. Except upon occasions where foreign royalties are visiting in London, no such safeguards were in evidence as were in force today to save the British monarch form the militants.

All the streets in the neighborhood of Buckingham Palace were hedged with troops who bore fixed bayonets. The thoroughfares through which the royal automobile was to pass after entering the city limits were thick with uniformed police and secret service operatives.

One thousand policeman were held in reserve and all the hospital attachees were warned to be in readiness for quick service as it was feared that any suffragette demonstration would end in rioting in which many persons would be hurt.

Detectives who pretended to be sight-seers, mingled with the men and women who hurried in and out of the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union, the organization of militant suffragettes.

At Aldershot the guard was heavy that all persons were held a distance from the royal pair.

In order to throw the suffragettes off the track the king and queen did not go direct to Buckingham Palace, after reaching London, but drove to Marlborough House, the residence of Dowager Queen Alexandra.

Great crowds had gathered around Buckingham Palace to witness the arrival of their Majesties and when it was learned that the king and queen had changed their plans because of the threats of the suffragettes murmurs against the women were heard.

King George wore the uniform of a field marshal of the British army and he replied with a military salute to the cheers of the people in the main streets.

TWO CHICKEN THIEVES ESCAPE FROM COUNTY JAIL

Arthur Ellsworth and Edward DeNike, With Only 25 Days to Serve, Break Coal Bin Lock and Get Out of Jail Early This Morning.

Some time between midnight and five o'clock this morning Arthur Ellsworth and Edward DeNike, two chicken thieves, made their escape from the cellar under the county jail by breaking the large Yale lock on the cellar door of the coal bin with the grate shaker of the large furnace. Both men had about twenty-five more days to serve of a four months' sentence in the jail imposed by Recorder Grogan for stealing chickens.

Ellsworth and DeNike were both trusties who did the cooking for the other prisoners in the county jail, and as trusties were allowed to sleep in a large room in the cellar off the kitchen which had been fitted up as a bedroom.

At eight o'clock Wednesday evening Jailer Isaac Doyle made his rounds of the jail and locked up the prisoners and going down cellar he saw to it that the windows and the cellar doors were securely locked. Shortly before midnight Mr. Doyle made another inspection before retiring and found that every one was accounted for.

Some time during the night the two trusties got up and dressed themselves and left their bedroom and got out into the cellar. They, of course, found the door of the coal bin locked and hunted around for some article to break the lock. They picked up the grate shaker and attacked the lock which soon gave way before the heavy blows. Swinging open the door of the coal bin they slipped out into the jail yard and made their escape.

At five o'clock this morning, when Jailer Doyle made his rounds, he found that both trusties were missing and a general alarm has been sent out for their apprehension.

From time immemorial it has been the custom to allow trusties to sleep in the cellar, and as Ellsworth and DeNike had only a few more days to serve it was not thought they would attempt to make an escape.

As is well known no prisoners who are held to await the action of the grand jury or those who are held awaiting trial in county court are made trusties, and only prisoners who are serving time for minor offences are so treated.

WAR CLOUDS LOOM DARKER THAN EVER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, May 21.—With the execution of Private Parks at Vera Cruz now accepted as a certainty and hope for the safety of Vice Consul John R. Silliman practically abandoned, military officials in Washington with a propensity for dallying with chance today were offering to bet two to one against the successful issue of the mediation conferences at Niagara Falls. Intervention by the United States was quoted in some circles at even money.

Victoriano Huerta's emphatic statement that he will not resign the provisional presidency, has strengthened the belief here that the present status is more than likely to undergo a sudden change for the worse and that the peace negotiations probably will be wrecked on the first proposal submitted to the parties concerned. Diplomats and army and navy officers in Washington are united in the belief that hostilities must come eventually.

The administration's strictly enforced censorship of the news of the Mexican situation is viewed by many as part of the program to keep the country's war plans entirely secret until it becomes necessary through the failure of mediation or some further aggressive act on the part of the dictator to bring Huerta to a finish. The government, it is known, is ready to throw an army of invasion into Mexico. Confidential reports from government agents in Mexico are believed to have convinced President Wilson that to permit the rebels to have full sway in Mexico after they defeat Huerta would be an offense against humanity. This is a popular opinion here, notwithstanding reports that the U. S. is giving moral support to Carranza. Present countenance of the rebels is regarded in some official circles as part of the diplomatic game this country is playing to stave off actual war as long as possible.

The belief that mediation is not likely to cure Mexico's ills today was voiced by Dr. Levi B. Salmans, a medical missionary in Mexico for nearly 30 years under the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions. Dr. Salmans, who has just come from Guanajuato, said:

"The policy of mediation has somewhat relieved the irritation by indicating to the Mexicans that we are ready to act fairly. It will not, however, influence Huerta to resign from the presidency nor coerce the rebel leaders into offering a truce to the dictator. The warring factions can hardly be expected to reach a mutual agreement and set up a united government for the country unless help comes from the outside.

"Many Mexicans are not unfavorably disposed to American intervention, because they realize that the object of such intervention is not to exploit, but to help."

More Stolen Goods Found.

More of the booty stolen from Judge Bird's house in Tarrytown on Sunday was found in Newburgh on Wednesday by Roundsman Dickey at the store of R. H. Gorrie, where it had been sold for old gold. The boys, Walter McCabe and Fred Anderson, who were arrested here by Sergeant Murray, admitted they had sold some of the stuff in Newburgh and Poughkeepsie. In the lot sold to Mr. Corrie was discovered a pin which had been stolen in Poughkeepsie.

SUFFRAGETTE RIOT AT BUCKINGHAM

Mrs. Pankhurst Arrested While Leading the Suffragette Army, Whereupon the Women Attempt to Mob the Police and are Beaten Up.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, May 21.—While leading an army of women upon Buckingham Palace, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militant suffragettes, was arrested this afternoon. Immediately after King George and Queen Mary arrived from Aldershot, where they have been for five days inspecting the great military establishment, the women gathered at Whitehall and moved toward Buckingham Palace. They sent word ahead demanding a personal interview with the king, while a petition had been prepared for presentation to the queen.

Their majesties, however, had stolen a march upon the suffragettes, for instead of going direct to Buckingham Palace upon their arrival, they went to the Marlborough House, the residence of Dowager Queen Alexandra.

More than 2,000 policemen, detectives and soldiers were on duty in the streets and around the palace to prevent rioting. Home Secretary McKenna had sent word to the leaders of the women that King George would not receive them under any circumstances but this did not deter them.

"If he won't see us we will see him," was the reply sent back to the home secretary.

As the army of women was moving along Constitution Hill, two policemen suddenly seized Mrs. Pankhurst and hurried her off to the police station. Mrs. Pankhurst's body guard of husky women, chosen for their courage and strength, gave an angry shout and attacked the policemen, but they were dispersed with dishevelled hair and torn dresses.

The palace grounds were carefully searched for the fear prevailed that fanatics among the women might attempt to do the king bodily harm.

Following the arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst, a riot broke out on Constitution Hill. Mounted police tried to clear the streets but the women formed themselves into a compact mob and fought savagely. The mounted police charged with the mass of femininity, smashing at the heads of the leaders with their heavy police batons. The yells of the enraged women drowned out the thuds of the truncheons as they fell with crushing force upon the heads and shoulders of the women.

Many women were knocked down and trampled. Some lay unconscious while the battle raged above their [illegible] — Others were trampled by horses and carried insensible to the hospitals. Snorting, rearing horses, maddened by the tumult, dashed into the fringe of the mob, scattering women right and left. Some of the women had their clothing almost wholly torn from their bodies. Others with flying hair and bloodstained faces fought like Amazons, hurling missiles and shrieking imprecations at the police.

The weapons of the mob were broken bottles, stones, rotten eggs, bombs filled with paint, and clubs.

Ambulances and police reserves were rushed to the scene and the injured were cared for outside the battle zone. The most strenuous of the women had to be strapped to their cots as they insisted upon going back into the fight when they regained consciousness.

Screaming in their blind rage the women threw chairs through the windows, hurled bottles of ink against the walls, tore up police records and overturned tables, in the station house.

While the battle raged on Constitution Hill and around the Palace grounds, members of the royal household mounted the towers of Buckingham Palace and watched the fray.

Spread out beneath them lay the scene of tumult in the streets. They saw the police charge time and again and the yells of the maddened women rose clear and strong to their ears. Above the tossing sea of waving arms and heads the watchers could make out the forms of the mounted policemen, riding through the outer ranks of the mob, the arms of the policemen rythmically rising and falling as they brought down their clubs upon the heads of the suffragettes. It was the worst suffragette riot London has ever known.

Within half an hour forty women were placed under arrest charged with assaulting policemen, rioting, inciting to riot, impairing traffic, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct.

Around the palace grounds sentries from the Scots Greys, the Imperial Household troops stood at attention or rested upon their carbines as they looked upon the battle before them.

The women, adopting military strategy kept compactly together in the middle of the streets, making it difficult for the policemen to segregate the mobs. Flying missles crashed through the windows of buildings adjoining the streets and the crash of shattered glass mingled with the shouts of the fighters.

Suddenly some one started up the anthem of the militant suffragettes and the women all joined.

Mean Insinuation.

Woman (excited and dishevelled)—"Quick! Give me a glass of brandy for a woman in a fit." Druggist (calmly)—"Yes, madam. To drink now or to take away with you?"—London Opinion.

LOST LIFE IN DEFENDING VALUABLES FROM THIEVES

Eugene Houghtaling, West Shore Station Agent at Tappan, Murdered by Burglars Who Sought to Loot the Station Safe and Were Prevented by His Brave Resistance.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Tappan, N. Y., May 21.—While heroically defending the property of his employers, Eugene Houghtaling, the young agent for the West Shore Railroad at this place, was shot to death today by two robbers who escaped with $18. Thousands of dollars' worth of gems and $500 in cash were in the safe and in the post office safe in the same building was a great quantity of stamps and specie, but the thieves became frightened and fled before they could secure all the booty.

William Forest, who lives across the street from the railway station, was aroused by the shooting and reached the street just in time to see the two men fleeing from he building. He fired upon them, but without effect.

Houghtaling was passing his lonely early morning vigil by talking on the telegraph wire with the station agent at Haverstraw, thirteen miles away, when the two robbers entered the station.

"Robbers are trying to get into my office," flashed Houghtaling on the wire.

"Quit your kidding," came the word from Haverstraw.

The men suspected that Houghtaling was telegraphing for aid apparently, and ordered him to stop. The young agent began rapping with his telegraph key again and the man at Haverstraw caught this message:

"For God's sake send help; they are going to shoot. Send—"

The message was broken off there.

The interior of the office showed that Houghtaling had put up a struggle even after he was wounded.

Eugene Houghtaling, who was attacked and killed at Tappan early this morning, was a brother of Herbert Houghtaling of No. 198 Main street, this city. He was the youngest of three brothers, all of whom engaged in railroad work. He was born at New Baltimore, where his father and mother are now living, and he is survived by them and two brothers, Herbert Houghtaling and George Houghtaling. He was unmarried. Herbert Houghtaling went to Tappan on an early train this morning. He is general agent at the freight and passenger depot of the Ulster & Delaware Railroad at Rondout and has been connected with that road for several years. He was formerly freight agent of the West Shore Railroad in this city and before that was agent at New Baltimore.

BIGGEST SHIP REACHES NEW YORK

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 21.—The new Hamburg-American liner, Vaterland, the greatest ship afloat, arrived here today from Hamburg, Cherbourg and Southampton on her maiden voyage. She brought 270 first class passengers, 142 second cabin passengers and 355 third class passengers, and 910 in the steerage. As there are 1,281 persons in the crew, the total of human souls on board the leviathan was 2,958.

The steamer made an average run of about 24 miles an hour. On board her were the directors of the line. The day's runs were 421, 578, 562, 580, 594 and 442 knots.

Dock Commissioner Smith went to Quarantine and boarded the steamer in response to an invitation to inspect the giantess.

The Vaterland is a sister ship of the Imperator. The immensity of her measurements are shown by the following figures: Tonnage, 58,000; length, 950 feet; beam (width) 100 feet; horse power, 65,000; speed, 25 knots an hour.

In addition to being the last word in luxury the Vaterland was constructed to be unsinkable. Her bulkheads are of steel and she has two "skins" so that if the outer hull is punctured the water will be kept out of the hold by the inner wall. In addition to being unsinkable the Vaterland is fire proof.

The big ship was decorated with flags as she slowly steamed up the bay and her siren occasionally answered the chorus of whistles and fog horn bursts that welcomed the new liner.

The cargo consisted of 2,316 barrels, of which 2,066 was beer and the balance salt.

Among the passengers were the Right Hon. Alexander Carlisle, designer of the Titanic; Admiral Oscar Von Trupel, German navy; ex-United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich and Edgar Allen Forbes, the author.

ARMY TO PROTECT BRITISH ROYALTY

Militant Suffragettes Were the Cause of Extraordinary Precautions Being Taken to Protect the King and Queen on Their Journey.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, May 21.—Two thousand policemen and armed soldiers protected King George and Queen Mary from suffragettes today when they returned from Aldershot to Buckingham Palace. Their Majesties, who have spent five days upon a trip of informal inspection to England's great military establishment at Aldershot, returned by automobile.

Warning had been given out that militant suffragettes would attempt to secure an interview with King George and that they would present a petition from working women to Queen Mary. This warning resulted in the strongest precautions being taken. Except upon occasions where foreign royalties are visiting in London, no such safeguards were in evidence as were in force today to save the British monarch form the militants.

All the streets in the neighborhood of Buckingham Palace were hedged with troops who bore fixed bayonets. The thoroughfares through which the royal automobile was to pass after entering the city limits were thick with uniformed police and secret service operatives.

One thousand policeman were held in reserve and all the hospital attachees were warned to be in readiness for quick service as it was feared that any suffragette demonstration would end in rioting in which many persons would be hurt.

Detectives who pretended to be sight-seers, mingled with the men and women who hurried in and out of the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union, the organization of militant suffragettes.

At Aldershot the guard was heavy that all persons were held a distance from the royal pair.

In order to throw the suffragettes off the track the king and queen did not go direct to Buckingham Palace, after reaching London, but drove to Marlborough House, the residence of Dowager Queen Alexandra.

Great crowds had gathered around Buckingham Palace to witness the arrival of their Majesties and when it was learned that the king and queen had changed their plans because of the threats of the suffragettes murmurs against the women were heard.

King George wore the uniform of a field marshal of the British army and he replied with a military salute to the cheers of the people in the main streets.

Judged by Test

"Pure Beer is food---nutritive and sustaining HEALTH FOOD---from which only good can come, unless through the fool-tactics of excess, like in gluttony of other foods.',

The above statement of fact is the word of men of science, who judge by TEST and not by what seems.

And so, against all hearsay that drink is an enemy of man, we bluntly declare the contrary to be the fact: Man has become the enemy of drink by debasing it himself.

ROAD CONDITIONS IN ULSTER COUNTY

Detours That Must be Made to Reach Various Places on Account of Ashokan Boulevard Construction —General Review of Road Conditions.

"The general road conditions in Ulster county at the present time are good considering the late season which has necessitated delay of permanent work to be done by the town superintendents of highways," said County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran, when asked in regard to road conditions in the county.

Mr. Loughran said that in view of the fact that the New York board of water supply are constructing at the present time the roads around the Ashokan reservoir it has become necessary to provide detours for the main roads in that section and that it is now difficult to go from Kingston beyond West Hurley. At a point near the Glenford Church it is necessary to detour to the south striking the old Glenford road proceeding thence westerly and joining on to the old state road near Olive, then the Ulster & Delaware railroad. Here another detour is necessary in order to avoid crossing the railroad tracks. This road brings the tourist out onto the main highway running between Hogsback and the main dam of the reservoir. After passing Hogsback, which is the local name of the settlement on the state road just west of Ashokan, another detour is necessary in order to avoid the construction going on between that place and Sand Hill. This detour goes over the old town highway which is usually in fair condition and comes out on the main highway just west of the new Esopus bridge. About one mile north the main state road to Pine Hill is met.

Keep Off South Boulevard.

The boulevard on the south side of the reservoir from the spillway over the Traver Hollow bridge is under construction and difficult detours are necessary and tourists are cautioned not to attempt traveling on the southern side of the reservoir.

The boulevard on the south side of the reservoir running from Stony Hollow to the spillway will shortly be under construction and tourists should be prepared to make a detour which will be properly posted.

Kingston to Pine Hill.

For a short time at least tourists going to Pine Hill should go by way of West Hurley, thence to Woodstock, to Bearsville, coming out on the main road at Cold Brook. The road from West Hurley to Woodstock is not of the best, but in case of being in a hurry it is preferred to that of going by way of Saugerties.

Kingston to Catskill.

The road between Katrine and Saugerties is being repaired by the state therefore certain sections are closed to traffic necessitating the use of the Flatbush road, much of which is state road.

Those coming from Saugerties to Kingston are required to detour to the east at the highway intersecting just north of Schoentag's Hotel. This road comes into the city at a point near the alms house.

The road from Saugerties to Catskill is all state road with the exception of a short stretch at the county line of Greene and Ulster. At this point the grade crossing will be eliminated by means of constructing an underground crossing just south of the county line. This will not interfere with vehicle traffic.

The road from Catskill to Coxsackie is all state road, but through the main street of the village of Coxsackie construction is going on but suitable detours are provided.

From Coxsackie to Albany the road is all state road.

Kingston to Newburgh.

The road between Kingston and Newburgh is all state road except a short stretch through the town of Esopus lying between Ulster Park and the town line of Lloyd. Plans are about completed for constructing this missing link and provisions will be made for the elimination of grade crossing at West Park by construction of an overhead crossing, and it is expected the work will be started the present season.

Kingston to Ellenville.

The road between Kingston and Ellenville is all state road except a short stretch just outside the city limits, which is in fair shape.

The concrete pavement between Hurley and Marbletown is quite rough, but is not at all dangerous to traffic.

Roads to be Constructed.

Contracts have been let by the state for necessary and minor repairs of some of the state roads, but provisions will be made to take care of traffic at all times.

Contracts have been let for the construction of the stretch in the town of Olive between the westerly end of the Ashokan boulevard and the easterly end of the state road at Cold Brook.

Also the main highway from Perrine's Bridge through Tillson to Rosendale.

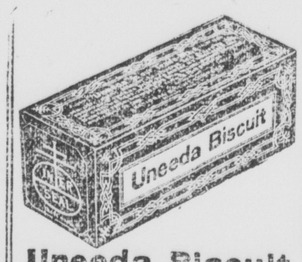

The road through the village of New Paltz past the Normal School joining on the county highway running through Modena and Plattekill to Newburgh will also be constructed.

After leaving the state road running from Rifton to New Paltz it is planned to provide a new alignment so that the necessity of crossing two dangerous railroad crossings will be eliminated.

Plans calling for construction of a highway approximately paralleling the Wallkill Valley tracks and making a continuation of Chestnut street in New Paltz are also under way.

Detour Signs.

The Automobile Club of Ulster county, of which Mr. Loughran is president, is erecting from time to time suitable detour signs for the convenience of the traveling public.

HORROR OF WAR REDUCED.

Disease Dangers of the Army of Mexican Invasion.

The possibility of war with Mexico has been before our people for some time; if a general war occurs it means invasion of Mexican territory. The question naturally arises, What are the disease dangers which will confront American soldiers in Mexico? It has long since passed into a truism that in war, disease kills more than bullets. Will this prove true in a Mexican war? The increased knowledge of preventive medicine since the Spanish-American war has encouraged the belief that the mortality from disease will be materially lessened. To what extent is this belief justified, and what are the diseases from which our troops may suffer in a tropical country and from which they should be protected? These questions, which have probably been in the minds of many of our people during the last few weeks, are answered in a recent issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

Aside from the ordinary diseases which might prevail among any body of two or three hundred thousand men, there are certain diseases to which soldiers in camp and in the field are particularly exposed. These are especially smallpox, typhoid fever and dysentery. Smallpox may be disregarded, as any troops sent into Mexico will be immune from this disease through vaccination. Typhoid fever, in the past, has been the awful scourge of military camps. The appalling experience of the Spanish-American war has not been forgotten by our people; the record of twenty thousand cases of typhoid in the army in six months produced an impression which can never be obliterated. But since then progress in preventive medicine has been made, and vaccination against typhoid is a result. Antityphoid inoculation has been subject to rigorous tests on a large scale in the army during the past two years with the result that in 1913, one of ninety thousand men at home and abroad, there was only a single case of typhoid fever among the inoculated, a record that can well be regarded as a triumph for preventive medicine. It is believed that the army surgeon now has a weapon against typhoid that will make the next war unique in this regard. Every officer and man now in the United States army and navy is practically safe against this disease, and each recruit will be inoculated at the time he is sworn into service. The next campaign in which the United States will participate will be a practical test of typhoid prophylaxis on a large scale. That it will prove the value of inoculation and will relieve warfare of one of its most horrible accompaniments there is little doubt.

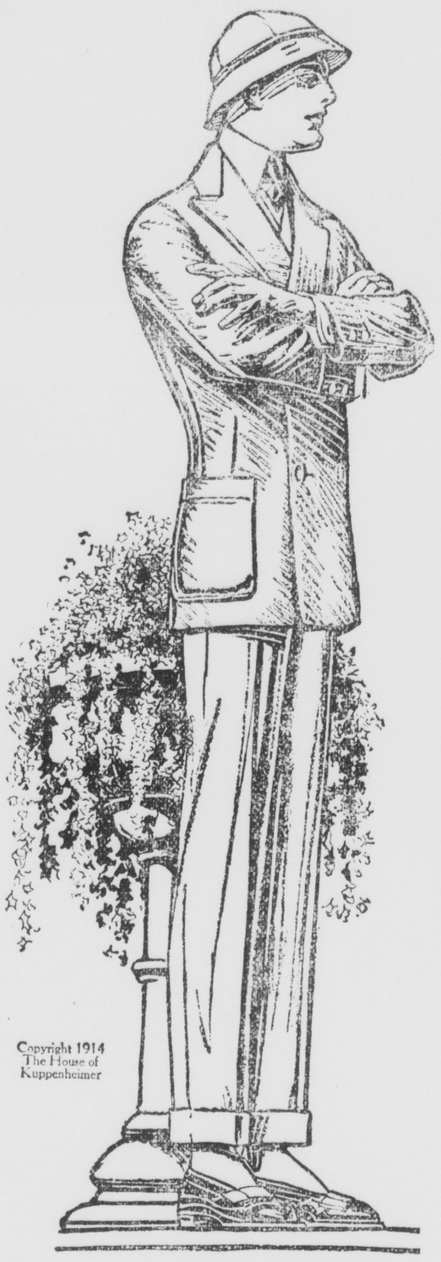

The dysenteries can be divided into those due to bacterial invasion and those caused by ptomains in foods. While the water and food of the soldiers will be more carefully guarded than ever before, a certain amount of intestinal disorder will be inevitable. It can safely be predicted, however, that the nation will be spared a repetition of the "embalmed-beef" scandals of 1898. The work of the general staff of the army, the development of departmental officers of high efficiency and the enormous amount of publicity on pure food that has taken place in the last decade, ought to insure the American soldiers a wholesome food supply. After the experience and warning of the past, the American people will hold to a strict accountability any one responsible for supplying the army with food materials which are not in every way up to the standard.

Of the diseases peculiar to tropical and semi-civilized countries, yellow fever, malaria, bubonic plague, cholera and typhus must be considered. The brilliant work of the last fifteen years in demonstrating the transmission of malaria and yellow fever by the mosquito has put our army and navy surgeons and sanitarians in possession of all the knowledge needed to control these diseases. The convincing demonstration of the practicability of their control given by General Gorgas in the Canal Zone has proved that malaria and yellow fever can be controlled completely in settled communities. Where men are living in fixed habitations, which can be screened and where all possible breeding-places of mosquitoes for a necessary distance can be destroyed, the complete eradication of these two diseases is possible. It remains to be seen, however, what methods can be developed for preventing mosquito infection among soldiers in the field. Mosquito nets can, of course, be carried, and patients in the field and hospitals can be protected as well as troops in barracks or permanent quarters. But how about troops in the field, scouting parties, pickets and outposts. Undoubtedly American ingenuity will devise methods to meet the needs, and the dangers of these two diseases will be greatly diminished, although occasional cases may be unavoidable. Epidemics, however, will be practically impossible.

Cholera, being borne through water, milk, flies or human carriers, can be prevented only through cleanliness and by maintaining the purity of water-supplies. It is not today a particularly dangerous possibility, as it can enter Mexico only by way of the seaports, most of which, in case of a campaign, would soon be in the hands of the navy and under quarantine regulations. Regarding typhus fever it is a strange coincidence that the work of Ricketts, by which he demonstrated, at the loss of his own life, that the bodylouse is the carrier of this disease, was done at Mexico City, where he went to carry on his investigations on account of the prevalence of typhus among the lower-class Mexicans. This disease, which in past centuries caused enormous loss of life in camps and on shipboard, is limited in its danger and can easily be prevented by avoiding dirty dwellings and contact with dirty individuals. There is as yet no known method of prevention except the avoidance of infection. It is probable that among any large number of soldiers in Mexico, a few cases of this disease will develop.

Bubonic plague is endemic in many of the near-by South American ports. It would probably be a constant danger in the Mexican seaports. Fortunately, it would be confined largely to the seaports and large towns. An army in the field, living in tents on the bare ground, would be practically safe from it. Probably one of the first measures inaugurated by our medical officers in taking possession of a Mexican seaport would be a campaign of rat extermination, as this animal has been shown to be responsible for plague propagation.

Babies Fear the Force of Gravity.

The first experiment which a baby makes is connected with the force of gravity. It is born with an instinctive or ancestral dread of the unrestrained action of that force upon its own body, and it is said to be able to cling with tenacity to a stick or branch of a tree. Later on it takes pleasure in dropping miscellaneous objects to see them fall, perhaps to see if they all fall alike.

And a very remarkable fact it is which is thus observed: The most familiar of all material facts and one of the least understood—least understood, that is, of all the simple physical facts which must surely be well within the limits of human comprehension. For if a philosopher is asked why all bodies tend to move toward the earth and why they all fall with steady, equal acceleration unless retarded or checked somehow he has to reply that he does not know.—Sir Oliver Lodge in Harper's Magazine.

But since then progress in preventive medicine has been made, and vaccination against typhoid is a result. Antityphoid inoculation has been subject to rigorous tests on a large scale in the army during the past two years with the result that in 1913, one of ninety thousand men at home and abroad, there was only a single case of typhoid fever among the inoculated, a record that can well be regarded as a triumph for preventive medicine. It is believed that the army surgeon now has a weapon against typhoid that will make the next war unique in this regard. Every officer and man now in the United States army and navy is practically safe against this disease, and each recruit will be inoculated at the time he is sworn into service. The next campaign in which the United States will participate will be a practical test of typhoid prophylaxis on a large scale. That it will prove the value of inoculation and will relieve warfare of one of its most horrible accompaniments there is little doubt.

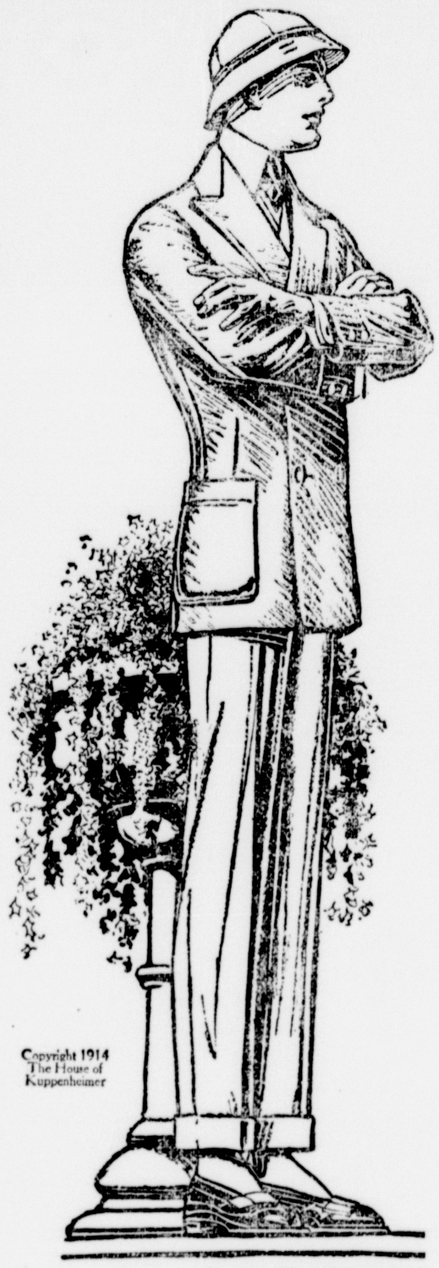

The dysenteries can be divided into those due to bacterial invasion and those caused by ptomains in foods. While the water and food of the soldiers will be more carefully guarded than ever before, a certain amount of intestinal disorder will be inevitable. It can safely be predicted, however, that the nation will be spared a repetition of the "embalmed-beef" scandals of 1898. The work of the general staff of the army, the development of departmental officers of high efficiency and the enormous amount of publicity on pure food that has taken place in the last decade, ought to insure the American soldiers a wholesome food-supply. After the experience and warning of the past, the American people will hold to a strict accountability any one responsible for supplying the army with food materials which are not in every way up to the standard.

Of the diseases peculiar to tropical and semi-civilized countries, yellow fever, malaria, bubonic plague, cholera and typhus must be considered. The brilliant work of the last fifteen years in demonstrating the transmission of malaria and yellow fever by the mosquito has put our army and navy surgeons and sanitarians in possession of all the knowledge needed to control these diseases. The convincing demonstration of the practicability of their control given by General Gorgas in the Canal Zone has proved that malaria and yellow fever can be controlled completely in settled communities. Where men are living in fixed habitations, which can be screened and where all possible breeding-places of mosquitoes for a necessary distance can be destroyed, the complete eradication of these two diseases is possible. It remains to be seen, however, what methods can be developed for preventing mosquito infection among soldiers in the field. Mosquito nets can, of course, be carried, and patients in the field and hospitals can be protected as well as troops in barracks or permanent quarters. But how about troops in the field, scouting parties, pickets and outposts. Undoubtedly American ingenuity will devise methods to meet the needs, and the dangers of these two diseases will be greatly diminished, although occasional cases may be unavoidable. Epidemics, however, will be practically impossible.

Cholera, being borne through water, milk, flies or human carriers, can be prevented only through cleanliness and by maintaining the purity of water-supplies. It is not today a particularly dangerous possibility, as it can enter Mexico only by way of the seaports, most of which, in case of a campaign, would soon be in the hands of the navy and under quarantine regulations. Regarding typhus fever it is a strange coincidence that the work of Ricketts, by which he demonstrated, at the loss of his own life, that the bodylouse is the carrier of this disease, was done at Mexico City, where he went to carry on his investigations on account of the prevalence of typhus among the lower-class Mexicans. This disease, which in past centuries caused enormous loss of life in camps and on shipboard, is limited in its danger and can easily be prevented by avoiding dirty dwellings and contact with dirty individuals. There is as yet no known method of prevention except the avoidance of infection. It is probable that among any large number of soldiers in Mexico, a few cases of this disease will develop.

Bubonic plague is endemic in many of the near-by South American ports. It would probably be a constant danger in the Mexican seaports. Fortunately, it would be confined largely to the seaports and large towns. An army in the field, living in tents on the bare ground, would be practically safe from it. Probably one of the first measures inaugurated by our medical officers in taking possession of a Mexican seaport would be a campaign of rat extermination, as this animal has been shown to be responsible for plague propagation.

They're Coming Back

One thing we've noticed particularly since we announced the arrival of our new Spring styles, is the large number of old customers who have been coming in to be fixed out for Spring and Summer, 1914.

That is a mighty encouraging sign. It shows conclusively that the suits and overcoats we have furnished them in seasons past have made good, fulfilled our promises to the letter. And it is this very quality---this way they have of holding old friends and making new ones through good service and absolute satisfaction---that you'll appreciate especially in

Babies Fear the Force of Gravity.

The first experiment which a baby makes is connected with the force of gravity. It is born with an instinctive or ancestral dread of the unrestrained action of that force upon its own body, and it is said to be able to cling with tenacity to a stick or branch of a tree. Later on it takes pleasure in dropping miscellaneous objects to see them fall, perhaps to see if they all fall alike.

And a very remarkable fact it is which is thus observed: The most familiar of all material facts and one of the least understood—least understood, that is, of all the simple physical facts which must surely be well within the limits of human comprehension. For if a philosopher is asked why all bodies tend to move toward the earth and why they all fall with steady, equal acceleration unless retarded or checked somehow he has to reply that he does not know.—Sir Oliver Lodge in Harper's Magazine.

ECONOMY AND PARSIMONY.

Taxpayers are grateful that the Legislature has finally adjourned for good, after cutting down appropriations to ten or eleven million dollars below last year's total, thus obviating the necessity of a direct tax. The way in which this economy has been effected, however, has discreditable features which voters are entitled to have pointed out.

The people elected a Republican Assembly because they were tired of the Democratic orgy of extravagance and graft. This Assembly, through a committee, made up a budget which was about ten million dollars lower than last year's but which made ample provision for all the legitimate needs of the State's business. It undertook to abolish useless offices and bar political loafers from the public treasury. This was very distasteful to the Democratic Senate, which was anxious to keep its favorite bums on the payrolls. Yet it feared to refuse to cut appropriations to approximately the Assembly's figures, on account of the approaching election. Governor Glynn also, out of like motives, lent himself to the scheme of keeping expenses down without throwing out the bums and incompetents to earn their living like other people.

The program adopted by the Governor and Senate was simple. They went on the principle that the people would applaud whatever looked like economy without inquiring into it too closely. So they insisted on cutting out necessary appropriations. The Assembly, being unable to pass bills by itself, was forced to accept a compromise, there being no sense in maintaining a deadlock all summer. Among other things, the item appropriating $200,000 for eliminating grade crossings was cut out. A like bill was vetoed last year by Governor Sulzer. This means a cessation in the work of preventing the continual loss of human lives at railroad crossings, the money which ought to be spent in this way going into the pockets of political heelers. Samples of the other items eliminated are the appropriation of $200,000 for canal maintenance, $100,000 for the New Paltz Normal School, and appropriations for much needed improvements and additions to State charitable institutions. The insane, the weak-minded and defectives in general—thousands of them—are denied proper care in order that Tammany politicians may be supported at public expense. The Sullivan committee, which has been too hot on the trail of Democratic grafters, has also been denied the small amount of $40,000 which it needed for expenses to complete its work. The crooks who have been robbing the State for several years back are now practically safe, since the statute of limitations will have protected them befor the inquiry can be resumed.

Fully as reprehensible as this financial policy has been the treatment of the election law. It will be remembered that at last fall's special session Governor Glynn rushed through a primary bill which was held up as a great reform measure. It turned out to be a fraud. It does not compel voters at the primaries to be identified by signatures. Legal residence is defined as any "place of stay," so that colonizing of voters is actually legalized. Sample ballots are withheld from voters, with the object of confusing them. It will be in the power of Murphy or any other boss to control the primaries according to his own liking. The very law which was advertised to facilitate the expression of the will of the masses of enrolled voters merely delivers them bound hand and foot to any boss who is unscrupulous enough to take advantage of the law. The Republican Assembly did its best to have these evil features of the law corrected, but it was foiled. Governor Glynn positively refused to send a special message to the Legislature authorizing it to do what every honest citizen knows should be done.

The long and short of the whole matter is that every benefit which the people have received from the Legislature of 1914 must be credited to the Republican majority in the Assembly, while every act which is a disgrace to the State is chargeable to the account of the Democratic party. Of course, the Democratic organs will try to twist the facts and bunco the voters during the coming campaign, but the facts are so clear that they cannot hope for much success.

THE GENTLEMAN.

It was a bit amusing, and something more, to read a while ago this definition of a gentleman: "A man who can carry both hands at his sides and be unconscious of them."

The measure was taken by a man, and naturally it brought forth some comment.

Among other criticisms made, one woman wrote that he evidently was picturing the drawing-room type of gentleman, that is, the "perfect gentleman," while, as for her, the best gentleman she ever had known, the most honorable and the kindliest of heart, was an extremely awkward man, not knowing how or where to hold his hands.

And another said. Alas and alas for poor Abraham Lincoln! Awkward as a boy, awkward as a man; what title had he to be known as a "perfect gentleman?"

But the fact remains that, with some folk, the measure of a gentleman is taken by the clothes he wears and how he wears them and by his familiarity with the conventional "musts" and "must nots" that are very imperative and impressive when taken quite seriously.

And with others, the measure goes deeper.

Among the one kind there's a bit of contempt and pity for a man who wears a coat cut in the wrong fashion for a particular hour in the day or neckwear unsuited for the occasion. And the contempt and pity grow worse if it is proven that he is ignorant of the fact that the time of day matters very much. Indifference may be overlooked, but it is fatal not to know.

But among the others, little points of honor and little marks of kindliness count for more than familiarity with the latest dressing code. And the "best gentleman" may be awkward, may be unmindful of the latest decree and may be genuinely ignorant of social rulings, if only his honor and his kindliness may be depended upon at any hour of any day.

Of course, conventional rulings must be granted their place in a well organized world, because, with everybody following a rule and a system of his own, things would go badly awry at times, and sensitive folk might be horribly shocked. But it is to wonder why society—even the kind that is written in great big letters—ever allowed itself to grow so precise and so rigid about a mere little question of dress that a man positively grows blanched of face and a-quiver at heart if he finds he has made the mistake of appearing in evening clothes when evening clothes are not required.

Because, you see, back of the incipient heart attack is the fear that the folk who are correctly dressed may take it for granted that he does not know!

And all the while, questions of comfort, of convenience and all that must be kept in the background—that is, among those who are ambitious to reach the drawing-room type of gentleman. Not that one would imply that the drawing-room type is not pleasant to meet and to know and that his unobtrusive correctness does not subtly and compellingly suggest good breeding, but that, after all, it seems a bit foolish for big men to be bothered or dismayed by such trifles. It is nice for a man to be so sure of himself that he can walk with hands sedately dropped at his sides and be as unconscious as a prince all the while, because it indicates " to the manner born," you know.

But there's always this to remember—

One little word unconsciously sent adrift, or one little unthinking act heard or observed by a person who measures rather carefully may completely deny the story told by the eloquent hands, for always it is the words and the acts that matter, not the graceful, well carried hands. The words and the acts—why, they give one a passing glimpse of the innermost soul and the real man under cover; while the easy carriage, the self-possession, delightful as they are, reveal no more than an attractive veneer.

One may forget and be pleased to forget even conspicuous awkwardness if the real marks of honor and kindliness are there. But to one who ever has caught a flash of a knave in a gentleman's disguise, the unlovely vision never fades from the mind.

Strange, is it not, the curious mixture in the world? Some wives, some sisters, some mothers, some friends are not happy at all unless their men-folk observe the little formalities as made and made over while others are pleased to believe a bit of indifference to the meaningless conventionalities makes room for acceptance of the bigger realities, and so their menfolk must not be too subservient to little rulings!

And the men themselves? There's this much to be said: They are more independent than the women.

A Realist.

President Wilson likes novels of an idealistic rather than a realistic trend.

At a reception in Washington a lady mentioned a realist who had just produced a shockingly depressing and unpleasant book.

"How would you define a realist?" some one asked, and the lady said:

" 'A realist is a writer who is disgusted with the world.'

"Oh, no, not at all" smiled the president. "A realist is a writer with whom the world is disgusted.—Washington Herald.

There was an old Scottish pagan in a small village who could be by no means persuaded to attend church. One day the minister met him and began:

"How is it, John, you're so persistent in your absence from church?"

"Well," replied John, "it's just like this—the sermons are over lang for me."

"John! John!" wrathfully cried the minister, "you'll dee and you'll go to a place where you'll hear no sermon, long or short."

"Ah, weel, maybe that will be," replied the phlegmatic John; "but I'm sure it'll not be for want of meenisters."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

"There are still a few honest men left in the world," said J. J. Hill, the financier, at a banquet. "It is well to be cautious, but we should not suspect everybody. If we are too suspicious we make ourselves absurb.

"I worked in St. Paul in my youth, and they still tell there about an old farmer and his wife who started for St. Paul on a visit.

Before the couple set off they were cautioned frequently by their friends to beware of the St. Paul sharpers. They replied that they would keep their eyes open. And they started on their journey with a nervous determination to look out for sharpers and confidence men.

"Well, on the way the old farmer got off at the junction to buy some lunch and the train went off without him. It was a terrible mishap. The last he saw of his wife she was craning out of the car window, shouting something reproachful at him which he couldn't ear or. account of the noise of the train.

"It happened that an express came along a few minutes later. The old farmer boarded the express and beat his wife to St. Paul by nearly an hour.

"He was waiting for her at the station when she arrived. He ran up to her and seized the valise.

"'Well, Jane,' he said, 'I am glad to see you again. I thought we was separated for good.'

"But the old lady jerked the valise from him indignantly.

"'No, ye don't, Mr. Sharper,' she cried. 'Don't be comin' any of yer confidence tricks on me or I'll call a policeman.' "—New York Globe.

Mr. Henpeck Explains.

It was a wizened little man who appeared before the judge and charged his wife with cruel and abusive treatment. His better half was a big, squarejawed woman, with a determined eye.

"In the first place, where did you meet this woman who has treated you so dreadfully?"" asked the judge.

"Well," replied the little man, making a brave attempt to glare defiantly at his wife, "I never did meet her. She just kind of overtook me."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

It does not compel voters at the primaries to be identified by signatures. Legal residence is defined as any "place of stay," so that colonizing of voters is actually legalized. Sample ballots are withheld from voters, with the object of confusing them. It will be in the power of Murphy or any other boss to control the primaries according to his own liking. The very law which was advertised to facilitate the expression of the will of the masses of enrolled voters merely delivers them bound hand and foot to any boss who is unscrupulous enough to take advantage of the law. The Republican Assembly did its best to have these evil features of the law corrected, but it was foiled. Governor Glynn positively refused to send a special message to the Legislature authorizing it to do what every honest citizen knows should be done.

The long and short of the whole matter is that every benefit which the people have received from the Legislature of 1914 must be credited to the Republican majority in the Assembly, while every act which is a disgrace to the State is chargeable to the account of the Democratic party. Of course, the Democratic organs will try to twist the facts and bunco the voters during the coming campaign, but the facts are so clear that they cannot hope for much success.

THE GENTLEMAN.

It was a bit amusing, and something more, to read a while ago this definition of a gentleman: "A man who can carry both hands at his sides and be unconscious of them."

The measure was taken by a man, and naturally it brought forth some comment.

Among other criticisms made, one woman wrote that he evidently was picturing the drawing-room type of gentleman, that is, the "perfect gentleman," while, as for her, the best gentleman she ever had known, the most honorable and the kindliest of heart, was an extremely awkward man, not knowing how or where to hold his hands.

And another said. Alas and alas for poor Abraham Lincoln! Awkward as a boy, awkward as a man; what title had he to be known as a "perfect gentleman?"

But the fact remains that, with some folk, the measure of a gentleman is taken by the clothes he wears and how he wears them and by his familiarity with the conventional "musts" and "must nots" that are very imperative and impressive when taken quite seriously.

And with others, the measure goes deeper.

Among the one kind there's a bit of contempt and pity for a man who wears a coat cut in the wrong fashion for a particular hour in the day or neckwear unsuited for the occasion. And the contempt and pity grow worse if it is proven that he is ignorant of the fact that the time of day matters very much. Indifference may be overlooked, but it is fatal not to know.

But among the others, little points of honor and little marks of kindliness count for more than familiarity with the latest dressing code. And the "best gentleman" may be awkward, may be unmindful of the latest decree and may be genuinely ignorant of social rulings, if only his honor and his kindliness may be depended upon at any hour of any day.

Of course, conventional rulings must be granted their place in a well organized world, because, with everybody following a rule and a system of his own, things would go badly awry at times, and sensitive folk might be horribly shocked. But it is to wonder why society—even the kind that is written in great big letters—ever allowed itself to grow so precise and so rigid about a mere little question of dress that a man positively grows blanched of face and a-quiver at heart if he finds he has made the mistake of appearing in evening clothes when evening clothes are not required.

Because, you see, back of the incipient heart attack is the fear that the folk who are correctly dressed may take it for granted that he does not know!

And all the while, questions of comfort, of convenience and all that must be kept in the background—that is, among those who are ambitious to reach the drawing-room type of gentleman. Not that one would imply that the drawing-room type is not pleasant to meet and to know and that his unobtrusive correctness does not subtly and compellingly suggest good breeding, but that, after all, it seems a bit foolish for big men to be bothered or dismayed by such trifles. It is nice for a man to be so sure of himself that he can walk with hands sedately dropped at his sides and be as unconscious as a prince all the while, because it indicates " to the manner born," you know.

But there's always this to remember—

One little word unconsciously sent adrift, or one little unthinking act heard or observed by a person who measures rather carefully may completely deny the story told by the eloquent hands, for always it is the words and the acts that matter, not the graceful, well carried hands. The words and the acts—why, they give one a passing glimpse of the innermost soul and the real man under cover; while the easy carriage, the self-possession, delightful as they are, reveal no more than an attractive veneer.

One may forget and be pleased to forget even conspicuous awkwardness if the real marks of honor and kindliness are there. But to one who ever has caught a flash of a knave in a gentleman's disguise, the unlovely vision never fades from the mind.

Strange, is it not, the curious mixture in the world? Some wives, some sisters, some mothers, some friends are not happy at all unless their men-folk observe the little formalities as made and made over while others are pleased to believe a bit of indifference to the meaningless conventionalities makes room for acceptance of the bigger realities, and so their menfolk must not be too subservient to little rulings!

And the men themselves? There's this much to be said: They are more independent than the women.

"Did the husband of that militant suffragette who was always longing for peace ever find it?" "He has found comparative peace. He is with the army in Mexico."—Houston Post.

"Lady," said the unshaven man at the back door. "I'm on a hunger strike." "Well," said the general housework person sharply, "what do you want?" "Can't you hear? I'm on a hunger strike. I want to be forcibly fed."—Buffalo Express.

"Everything seems to be going up in price. Would you believe it, it costs almost as much nowadays to dress a child as it does a grown person?" "I don't doubt it at all. Only yesterday I had to buy a new dog collar for Fifi and the prices have almost doubled."—Detroit Free Press.

A schoolboy was given a sum to do. When it was done he took it to the teacher, who looked at it and said: "This answer is wrong by two cents. Go back to your seat and do it correctly." "If you please, sir," said the youngster, fishing in his pocket. "I'd rather pay the difference."—Washington Star.

A Realist.

President Wilson likes novels of an idealistic rather than a realistic trend.

At a reception in Washington a lady mentioned a realist who had just produced a shockingly depressing and unpleasant book.

"How would you define a realist?" some one asked, and the lady said:

"'A realist is a writer who is disgusted with the world.'

"Oh, no, not at all" smiled the president. "A realist is a writer with whom the world is disgusted."—Washington Herald.

Plenty of Company.

There was an old Scottish pagan in a small village who could be by no means persuaded to attend church. One day the minister met him and began:

"How is it, John, you're so persistent in your absence from church?"

"Well," replied John, "it's just like this—the sermons are over lang for me."

"John! John!" wrathfully cried the minister, "you'll dee and you'll go to a place where you'll hear no sermon, long or short."

"Ah, weel, maybe that will be," replied the phlegmatic John; "but I'm sure it'll not be for want of meenisters."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Didn't Know Him.

"There are still a few honest men left in the world," said J. J. Hill, the financier, at a banquet. "It is well to be cautious, but we should not suspect everybody. If we are too suspicious we make ourselves absurb.

"I worked in St. Paul in my youth, and they still tell there about an old farmer and his wife who started for St. Paul on a visit.

Before the couple set off they were cautioned frequently by their friends to beware of the St. Paul sharpers. They replied that they would keep their eyes open. And they started on their journey with a nervous determination to look out for sharpers and confidence men.

"Well, on the way the old farmer got off at the junction to buy some lunch and the train went off without him. It was a terrible mishap. The last he saw of his wife she was craning out of the car window, shouting something reproachful at him which he couldn't ear or account of the noise of the train.

"It happened that an express came along a few minutes later. The old farmer boarded the express and beat his wife to St. Paul by nearly an hour.

"He was waiting for her at the station when she arrived. He ran up to her and seized the valise.

"'Well, Jane,' he said, 'I am glad to see you again. I thought we was separated for good.'

"But the old lady jerked the valise from him indignantly.

"'No, ye don't, Mr. Sharper,' she cried. 'Don't be comin' any of yer confidence tricks on me or I'll call a policeman.'"—New York Globe.

Mr. Henpeck Explains.

It was a wizened little man who appeared before the judge and charged his wife with cruel and abusive treatment. His better half was a big, squarejawed woman, with a determined eye.

"In the first place, where did you meet this woman who has treated you so dreadfully?" asked the judge.

"Well," replied the little man, making a brave attempt to glare defiantly at his wife, "I never did meet her. She just kind of overtook me."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

"A Case of Suspension."

Friday evening the amusing farce, "A Case of Suspension," will be given by the members of the St. James Epworth League at the parlors of the church, beginning at 8:15 o'clock. And take some change with you, for you will surely want some ice cream and cake while you talk over the fun of the farce.

WEMLINGER CO. TAKES TITLE TO GILL PROPERTY

Deal Closed by President Wemlinger and Contract Will Be Awarded for the Foundation of the New Building Before the End of the Week--Steel Piling Business is Booming.

For some time past efforts have been made in Kingston to secure capital for the construction of the proposed plant of The Wemlinger Steel Piling Co. at Rondout. It was the intention of the company to begin operations only after a sufficient number of subscriptions were received to cover the cost of the plant. Although many substantial men signed up for various amounts, a larger number of interested men indicated that they would wait until after construction had actually begun to come in with their contributions.

On the other hand, the company felt that if the Kingston people were properly desirous of securing the proposed plant for the city, there would be no dearth of financial support. This was not forthcoming as quickly as expected, the cause being, probably, the unsatisfactory business conditions that have prevailed for some months.

Nevertheless, in view of a decided improvements in its business and the necessity of providing a place for the manufacture of its product, led the directors of the Wemlinger Steel Piling Co. to reconsider their former attitude. Accordingly, a board meeting was held at the office of the company in New York on Tuesday evening. David Gill Jr., of Kingston, who is a director of the company, was present. After most careful consideration, and feeling assured of the unusual advantages of the proposed location, the directors voted to begin the construction of the plant at once.

Therefore, J. R. Wemlinger, president of the company, accompanied David Gill Jr., who returned to Kingston last evening, and signed the formal papers today which gave the company title to the property of Mr. Gill on the Rondout creek. While here Mr. Wemlinger conferred with Gerard W. Betz, the architect, who is finishing the plans for the proposed factory and it is expected that before the week is over, contract for at least the foundation of the building will be awarded and the actual construction will have begun.

The volume of business booked lately by the company has been encouraging and indicates a revival of business in its line. This is greatly assisted by the fact that municipalities are now able to dispose of their bonds very readily, while a year ago many proposed improvements could not be undertaken because bond issues could not be sold. That affected very materially the business of the company for the reason that so much of its product is used in the construction of municipal improvements.

Among the orders booked recently by the Wemlinger Steel Piling Company are the following: Rochester Bridge Company, Rochester, Ind., 59280 lbs; town of Hinsdale, N. H., 3000 lbs; E. H. Crowell, Crown Point, Ind., 92160 lbs; C. J. Waterhouse, New Haven, Conn., 8880 lbs; Seymour Renick, Findlay, Ohio, 46500 lbs; Freda & Carlucci, Scranton, O., 142000 lbs; Cheney Bros., South Manchester, Conn., 15000 lbs; and Hackedorn Contracting Company, Indianapolis, Ind., 65095 lbs. Thus the company has now orders for 304,115 lbs of its steel piling and prospects of doubling this quantity before the first of June.

Most of the above material is to be used in the construction of coffer-dams for bridge piers and the order received from the Hackedorn Contracting Company is especially interesting in that its application in the big bridges for the city of Middletown, Ohio, connects the product of this company with one of the most important municipal improvements in the middle west.

As stated in the Hamilton (Ohio) Evening Journal, the construction of this bridge and viaduct in the Great Miami Valley was made necessary by the ravages of the Easter flood of last year. The total length of the bridge and viaduct is 1921 feet, which assures the people of Middletown that never again will they suffer from backwater in flood times on account of obstructions in the river.

The foundations of this bridge are to go extremely deep and Wemlinger steel sheet piling will be relied on for the construction of the piers. Probably not less than 600,000 lbs will ultimately be required for this job alone.

All the orders for the middle west have been booked through the Chicago office of the company opened last April first in charge of its energetic and euthusiastic second vice president, Otto Th. Carpentier, whom several of our readers will remember having met during his visit last February.

HEARING HELD ON LOCAL HIGHWAYS

A hearing was held before the state highway department on Tuesday at Albany in reference to the refusal of County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran to approve the final acceptance of the construction of the state highway running from the village of Saugerties northerly to the Greene county line. The contractor, John Do[illegible] was represented by ex-Mayor [illegible]. The good roads committe of the board of supervisors were present at the request of the highway commission as well as County Attorney John W. Eckert, Supervisor John D. Fratsher, H. C. Finger, the town superintendent; Division Engineer B. H. Wait, Assistant Engineer H. D. Darrow, and the inspectors who had charge of the road. At the close of the hearing the commission reserved decision until a personal inspection of the road could be made.

A hearing was also held in reference to certain work necessary to be done on the West Hurley road at a point near the Lockwood farm just west of the old toll gate. It appeared from all the facts presented that the bad condition of the raod was not due to the fault or negligence of the contractor, but apparantly due to failure to provide in the original plans for sufficient drainage, and as there appeared to be no objection from those present at the hearing it was decided, in the best interests of the state, to order a small amount of additional work done.

On Wednesday a hearing was held in reference to moving the trolley tracks during the construction of the county highway running between Highland and Highland Landing in the town of Lloyd. This road had been held up and the public greatly inconvenienced due to the inability to come to a satisfactory agreement with the trolley company. The hearing Wednesday, however, seemed to clear up the clouds which have hung over this road and it is very apparent the contractors will now be able to proceed with the construction of this road without further interference. The plans call for construction of brick pavement for the entire length of the road.

Parisian Swashbucklers.

At one time the mousquetaire was a notable type, common on the boulevards of Paris, of the swaggering braggart. These amiable Parisians were in evidence at the end of the empire. After the war of 1870 they reappeared at Turtoni's. There upon the steps about De Scholl were seated the famous Alfonso de Almada, Ezpelata, G. de Borda, Chapron, Feuillant and Gaston Jollivet, who freely employed his valor and the wisdom of his wit in quenching the conflicts. A difficult task, for these altercations frequently were made out of nothing.

"Monsieur," one of the mousquetaires would suddenly declare to an inoffensive passer by, "you have been looking at me cross eyed. I do not like that."

"No"— the other would begin his reply.

"Ah, ha! Then I have lied! There's my card!"

Then there would be a meeting on the field of honor. Oh, that was a beautiful time!

Too Much for Him.

A colored porter for a local druggist was told to go to another pharmacy to get some cimcifugo rasiemoses. He stood, open-mouthed, and gazed at his "boss," then asked: "Ain't thar any other name for dat?"

Loses Its Charm.

It's difficult for a newly married man to generate much enthusiasm over his bride's beautiful hair after he has seen her pile it on the bureau for the night.

ULSTER ACADEMY'S GRADUATING CLASS

The Senior class of Ulster Academy now consists of thirty-one members who will graduate in June. The graduating class this year will be about the same size as the one that left Ulster's halls last year. Five of the class are honor students, while twelve deserve honorable mention.

Embarrassing.

Miss Blank was not young when she was married, wherefore the innocent question of a little neighbor proved annoying. "Why, how nice of you to bring me flowers, Jimmie!" was the way the trouble started. "And such a surprise, too; I don't think I ever had such a nice surprise before in all my life." "Not even when you got married?" asked the wide-eyed child.

In Her New Place.

"How are you getting on at your new place?" remarked a lady of a girl whom she had recommended for a situation. "Very well, thank you," answered the girl. "I am glad to hear it," said the lady. "Your employer is a very [illegible] person, and you cannot do too mu[illegible] for her." "I don't mean to ma'am," was the innocent reply.

The total length of the bridge and viaduct is 1921 feet, which assures the people of Middletown that never again will they suffer from backwater in flood times on account of obstructions in the river.

The foundations of this bridge are to go extremely deep and Wemlinger steel sheet piling will be relied on for the construction of the piers. Probably not less than 600,000 lbs will ultimately be required for this job alone.

All the orders for the middle west have been booked through the Chicago office of the company opened last April first in charge of its energetic and euthusiastic second vice president, Otto Th. Carpentier, whom several of our readers will remember having met during his visit last February.

HEARING HELD ON LOCAL HIGHWAYS

A hearing was held before the state highway department on Tuesday at Albany in reference to the refusal of County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran to approve the final acceptance of the construction of the state highway running from the village of Saugerties northerly to the Greene county line. The contractor, John Do... was represented by ex-Mayor ... The good roads committe of the board of supervisors were present at the request of the highway commission as well as County Attorney John W. Eckert, Supervisor John D. Fratsher, H. C. Finger, the town superintendent; Division Engineer B. H. Wait, Assistant Engineer H. D. Darrow, and the inspectors who had charge of the road. At the close of the hearing the commission reserved decision until a personal inspection of the road could be made.

A hearing was also held in reference to certain work necessary to be done on the West Hurley road at a point near the Lockwood farm just west of the old toll gate. It appeared from all the facts presented that the bad condition of the raod was not due to the fault or negligence of the contractor, but apparantly due to failure to provide in the original plans for sufficient drainage, and as there appeared to be no objection from those present at the hearing it was decided, in the best interests of the state, to order a small amount of additional work done.

On Wednesday a hearing was held in reference to moving the trolley tracks during the construction of the county highway running between Highland and Highland Landing in the town of Lloyd. This road had been held up and the public greatly inconvenienced due to the inability to come to a satisfactory agreement with the trolley company. The hearing Wednesday, however, seemed to clear up the clouds which have hung over this road and it is very apparent the contractors will now be able to proceed with the construction of this road without further interference. The plans call for construction of brick pavement for the entire length of the road.

Parisian Swashbucklers.

At one time the mousquetaire was a notable type, common on the boulevards of Paris, of the swaggering braggart. These amiable Parisians were in evidence at the end of the empire. After the war of 1870 they reappeared at Turtoni's. There upon the steps about De Scholl were seated the famous Alfonso de Almada, Ezpelata, G. de Borda, Chapron, Feuillant and Gaston Jollivet, who freely employed his valor and the wisdom of his wit in quenching the conflicts. A difficult task, for these altercations frequently were made out of nothing.

"Monsieur," one of the mousquetaires would suddenly declare to an inoffensive passer by, "you have been looking at me cross eyed. I do not like that."

"No"— the other would begin his reply.

"Ah, ha! Then I have lied! There's my card!"

Then there would be a meeting on the field of honor. Oh, that was a beautiful time!

Too Much for Him.

A colored porter for a local druggist was told to go to another pharmacy to get some cimcifugo rasiemoses. He stood, open-mouthed, and gazed at his "boss," then asked: "Ain't thar any other name for dat?"

Loses Its Charm.

It's difficult for a newly married man to generate much enthusiasm over his bride's beautiful hair after he has seen her pile it on the bureau for the night.

Embarrassing.

Miss Blank was not young when she was married, wherefore the innocent question of a little neighbor proved annoying. "Why, how nice of you to bring me flowers, Jimmie!" was the way the trouble started. "And such a surprise, too; I don't think I ever had such a nice surprise before in all my life." "Not even when you got married?" asked the wide-eyed child.

In Her New Place.

"How are you getting on at your new place?" remarked a lady of a girl whom she had recommended for a situation. "Very well, thank you," answered the girl. "I am glad to hear it," said the lady. "Your employer is a very ... person, and you cannot do too mu... for her." "I don't mean to ma'am," was the innocent reply.

Kindergarten Progress.

In 10 years kindergartens in the United States have grown from 3,244 kindergartens with 205,000 children to 7,557 kindergartens enrolling 364,189 children, according to a bulletin issued by the United States bureau of education.

Notwithstanding this encouraging increase in schools and pupils, the great majority of children are still without the advantages of kindergarten training. Only 9 per cent of the children of kindergarten age—4 to 6—were in kindergartens.

"Much constructive work must be done," declares Miss Myra Winchester, of the kindergarten division of the bureau, reviewing the figures. "The child of kindergarten age is so young, so impressionable, so incapable of defending himself against the faulty words and actions and mental attitudes of the teacher, that means must be devised to eliminate or at least diminish the number of faulty teachers. Standards of requirements as to personality and academic and professional training must be raised and maintained, for the surest guarantee of the extension of kindergartens is good work done by good teachers."

Miss Winchester traces the path of progress in kindergartens from private philanthropy to public support. "First there were private kindergartens, regarded as more or less of a luxury for the well-to-do. Next, good men and women began to provide 'charity' kindergartens for the poor and neglected children; churches, settlements, kindergarten associations, and mill owners gave and continue to give glad and generous support to such kindergartens. Then as a direct outgrowth of the work of the kindergarten associations, there have evolved training schools for kindergarten teachers; the state legislature has been induced to pass a bill making it legal to institute public school kindergartens; local boards of education have partially, then entirely, taken over the care and education of little children, and finally state and city normal schools have incorporated the kindergarten training schools, making them into a regularly integrated department."

The bureau's bulletin on kindergartens gives complete statistics for private and public kindergartens throughout the United States so far as these were reported; together with opinions of superintendents, supervisors and teachers as to the results of kindergarten training in their communities. The bulletin is illustrated with photographs of real kindergarten children in real kindergarten activities.

Moral Education.

In moral education don't moralize. This is the advice of Prof. F. G. Gould, an English educator of note, who has been touring the United States as demonstrator for the Moral Education League of London. Prof. Gould's carefully worked out program for moral instruction in the elementary grades impresses bureau of education officials as one of the most valuable of the present efforts to make education tell in fine character.

Story-telling forms the basis for most of the instruction in Prof. Gould's plan. Once a week, or oftener, it is assumed, the teacher or principal gives a systematic lesson on the conduct of life. The various virtues are taught, not as abstractions, but by concrete examples and by intersting stories. The teacher is not say, "This ought to be done;" she is rather to say, "This thing has been done." Hearing constantly about right actions, the pupils learn to appreciate right conduct. The spirit behind the instruction is the spirit of service; but this and other technical moral terms are to be rarely, if ever, mentioned. "It is possible," Prof. Gould points out, "to give many lessons on civic duty and scarcely ever use the word patriotism, and yet the temper of consecration to one's duty and country may permeate the teaching and inspire the pupils."

Prof. Gould disclaims anything novel or faddish about his work. It is by no means new, he says. "I have over and over again affirmed that my teaching was, in the strict sense of the term, antiquated; that is to say, it consists of the employment of the concrete and dramatic manner which is illustrated by ancient poets as well as modern, by the narratives and parables of the Bible or the Talmud, by balladsingers and story-tellers of the middle ages, and by allegorists such as Comenius and John Bunyan.

"What perhaps I may claim is that I have reminded educators of simple, fundamental principles, which, in the somewhat unnatural rush of overcrowded school programs, we are all apt to forget; and along with that effort to get back to more direct action in moral teaching, I have, it may be, combined a certain enthusiasm and freshness; at least I hope so."

Kindergarten Progress.

In 10 years kindergartens in the United States have grown from 3,244 kindergartens with 205,000 children to 7,557 kindergartens enrolling 364,189 children, according to a bulletin issued by the United States bureau of education.

Notwithstanding this encouraging increase in schools and pupils, the great majority of children are still without the advantages of kindergarten training. Only 9 per cent of the children of kindergarten age—4 to 6—were in kindergartens.

"Much constructive work must be done," declares Miss Myra Winchester, of the kindergarten division of the bureau, reviewing the figures. "The child of kindergarten age is so young, so impressionable, so incapable of defending himself against the faulty words and actions and mental attitudes of the teacher, that means must be devised to eliminate or at least diminish the number of faulty teachers. Standards of requirements as to personality and academic and professional training must be raised and maintained, for the surest guarantee of the extension of kindergartens is good work done by good teachers."

Miss Winchester traces the path of progress in kindergartens from private philanthropy to public support. "First there were private kindergartens, regarded as more or less of a luxury for the well-to-do. Next, good men and women began to provide 'charity' kindergartens for the poor and neglected children; churches, settlements, kindergarten associations, and mill owners gave and continue to give glad and generous support to such kindergartens. Then as a direct outgrowth of the work of the kindergarten associations, there have evolved training schools for kindergarten teachers; the state legislature has been induced to pass a bill making it legal to institute public school kindergartens; local boards of education have partially, then entirely, taken over the care and education of little children, and finally state and city normal schools have incorporated the kindergarten training schools, making them into a regularly integrated department."

The bureau's bulletin on kindergartens gives complete statistics for private and public kindergartens throughout the United States, so far as these were reported; together with opinions of superintendents, supervisors and teachers as to the results of kindergarten training in their communities. The bulletin is illustrated with photographs of real kindergarten children in real kindergarten activities.

Moral Education.

In moral education don't moralize. This is the advice of Prof. F. G. Gould, an English educator of note, who has been touring the United States as demonstrator for the Moral Education League of London. Prof. Gould's carefully worked out program for moral instruction in the elementary grades impresses bureau of education officials as one of the most valuable of the present efforts to make education tell in fine character.

Story-telling forms the basis for most of the instruction in Prof. Gould's plan. Once a week, or oftener, it is assumed, the teacher or principal gives a systematic lesson on the conduct of life. The various virtues are taught, not as abstractions, but by concrete examples and by intersting stories. The teacher is not say, "This ought to be done;" she is rather to say, "This thing has been done." Hearing constantly about right actions, the pupils learn to appreciate right conduct. The spirit behind the instruction is the spirit of service; but this and other technical moral terms are to be rarely, if ever, mentioned. "It is possible," Prof. Gould points out, "to give many lessons on civic duty and scarcely ever use the word patriotism, and yet the temper of consecration to one's duty and country may permeate the teaching and inspire the pupils."

Prof. Gould disclaims anything novel or faddish about his work. It is by no means new, he says. "I have over and over again affirmed that my teaching was, in the strict sense of the term, antiquated; that is to say, it consists of the employment of the concrete and dramatic manner which is illustrated by ancient poets as well as modern, by the narratives and parables of the Bible or the Talmud, by ballad-singers and story-tellers of the middle ages, and by allegorists such as Comenius and John Bunyan.

"What perhaps I may claim is that I have reminded educators of simple, fundamental principles, which, in the somewhat unnatural rush of overcrowded school programs, we are all apt to forget; and along with that effort to get back to more direct action in moral teaching, I have, it may be, combined a certain enthusiasm and freshness; at least I hope so."

UP-TO-DATE CLOAK MFG. CO.

303-305 Wall Street, Kingston, N. Y.

Fourteen years ago we started business in a modest way in a store where we are now located. The store at that time was occupied by Banta's Candy Kitchen, the dimensions of which was 17 by 60 feet, the building being owned by the Wynkoop Estate and occupied by three other tenants—Geo. B. Styles, Auchmoody & Oakes and Miss Boice. The business at that time, as at present, was carried on by Frank Forman and in his employ 14 years ago was two salesladies and one tailor. After 2 years Mr. Frank Forman found, by fair dealing and gaining the confidence of the public, he had outgrown this store, and that enlargement was necessary. The purchase of the building was consummated and at once improvements were under way. Today to show the rapid growth of the Reliable UP-TO-DATE CLOAK MFG. CO. with Frank Forman as its President, we state with much pride, that we have the best equipped store in this section of the state with 30 employes who are kept busy from the time they enter the store until closing time. Step by step we have grown until now we occupy an enviable position in the business world of this section. This has only been accomplished by painstaking efforts in everything that pertains to the welfare of our customers—supplying the largest assortments of new things, giving our customers the best of good service and keeping prices as low as possible consistent with dependable quality merchandise.

MEDIATORS FIND ONLY CONFUSION

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Mediation Headquarters, Clifton Hotel, Niagara Falls, Ont., May 21. —Opening of the mediation negotiations here today found the Mexican peace problem as much confused as ever.

None of the attaches here would predict the course of the representatives of the Huerta administration. That they would fight doggedly any proposal that the great estates throughout their country be broken up and the peons given the land, as demanded by President Wilson, was regarded as certain, however. This seemed the logical attitude for men identified with the Cientifico of the southern republic.

Yet no one watching the silent self-contained delegates of the Huerta government could say what they would propose as an alternative or a better solution of the chaos beyond the Rio Grand.

If these had definite proposals for securing harmony in Mexico, except by force of arms they had not divulged them to any one since they came under the protection of the Union Jack.

"Eliminate Huerta and divide the land among the people" is the demand that came with the American representatives. Over the direct wire from the White House to the scene of the conference has come no hint that this demand will be compromised. President Wilson calls for an economic revolution in Mexico as a cure for revolutions by arms. The stubborn man in Mexico City is believed to be preparing to leave his office, but refuses to concede that his whole party and class shall resign its power. On this rock he will rally all that are left in his domain who believe that the great estates should continue and that the peons should own none of the soil.

Today brought the first real test of the mediation proceedings. The American representatives talked with the Argentine and Brazilian mediators, reviewing with them the situation as seen by the American government.

With Minister Suarez, of Chile, the third mediator present today the ground was gone over informally with the Mexicans. Next will come the formal conferences. It is generally understood that the elimination of Huerta will be the first item to be considered.

As the negotiations began the position of Argentina as leader in the movement to make the republics of South America co-equal with the United States in determining the affairs of the western hemisphere, became hourly more evident.

Minister Naon is the soul of the conference. While he yields to Ambassador Da Gama of Brazil as the diplomat of higher social rank, who is entitled to preside at the conference, he is by no means second in activity and enthusiasm. Senor Naon is throwing his whole soul into this mediation. He looks upon this as an hour of destiny at which his nation is arriving at a world power. From it he believes will come a new self reliance not only to the citizens of Argentina, but to every South American.

Minister Suarez of Chile arrived shortly after midnight. This mediator is accompanied by Manuel Salinas, Fulio Maquiera, James Quesada and Eduard Suarez Jr.

Uncertainty as to the time for the opening of the sessions was settled when Secretary Vernier posted a bulletin announcing that "Conversations between the mediators and the Mexican representatives would begin at 11:30 o'clock."

The belief that the three Mexican delegates will be supplanted by three others representing the Constitutionalist cause became strong here today and was discussed with high interest among the Latin-American diplomats who are here watching the progress of the peace conference.

It is felt that President Wilson would rather deal with the Constitutionalists who are now coming into power in Mexico, rather than with delegates representing a government that is tottering to its fall.

NEW UP-TO-DATE Cloak AND Suit STORE!

This new store opened its doors to the public last Saturday, and despite the bitter opposition—the spreading of slanderous, libellous stories by our chief competitor—we scored a business victory far greater than we had believed possible. To the discriminating women of Kingston and the surrounding countryside we have demonstrated the possibility of giving REAL BARGAINS--not bargains on paper only—not sales on "job lot" apparel that is dear at any price—not a price lowering on cheap, slammed-together sweat-shop products—but legitimate, honest bargain-giving on clean, new, crisp merchandise—bargains that, if the truth were known, caused The Enemy many sleepless hours—hours of chagrin and worriment.

Yes, our first week in Kingston has been one of phenomenal success. We are proud to say that our ready-to-wear establishment has been visited by hundreds of women, who displayed enthusiasm over the beautiful new creations and the unmatched values in Summertime apparel that is "different."

There's no "plunder" in our stocks. Therefore we cannot give away merchandise. A glance at the appended Circus Specials for Friday and Saturday will prove that we have approached the "give away" point as closely as business prudence will permit. The price pruning is genuine, and to achieve this masterful bargain giving we have not resorted to the inflation of values to make low prices.

Minister Naon is the soul of the conference. While he yields to Ambassador Da Gama of Brazil as the diplomat of higher social rank, who is entitled to preside at the conference, he is by no means second in activity and enthusiasm. Senor Naon is throwing his whole soul into this mediation. He looks upon this as an hour of destiny at which his nation is arriving at a world power. From it he believes will come a new self reliance not only to the citizens of Argentina, but to every South American.

Minister Suarez of Chile arrived shortly after midnight. This mediator is accompanied by Manuel Salinas, Fulio Maquiera, James Quesada and Eduard Suarez Jr.

Uncertainty as to the time for the opening of the sessions was settled when Secretary Vernier posted a bulletin announcing that "Conversations between the mediators and the Mexican representatives would begin at 11:30 o'clock."

The belief that the three Mexican delegates will be supplanted by three others representing the Constitutionalist cause became strong here today and was discussed with high interest among the Latin-American diplomats who are here watching the progress of the peace conference.

It is felt that President Wilson would rather deal with the Constitutionalists who are now coming into power in Mexico, rather than with delegates representing a government that is tottering to its fall.

Great Circus Specials at Forman's

NEW UP-TO-DATE Cloak AND Suit STORE!

This new store opened its doors to the public last Saturday, and despite the bitter opposition—the spreading of slanderous, libellous stories by our chief competitor—we scored a business victory far greater than we had believed possible. To the discriminating women of Kingston and the surrounding countryside we have demonstrated the possibility of giving REAL BARGAINS--not bargains on paper only—not sales on "job lot" apparel that is dear at any price—not a price lowering on cheap, slammed-together sweat-shop products—but legitimate, honest bargain-giving on clean, new, crisp merchandise—bargains that, if the truth were known, caused The Enemy many sleepless hours—hours of chagrin and worriment.

Yes, our first week in Kingston has been one of phenomenal success. We are proud to say that our ready-to-wear establishment has been visited by hundreds of women, who displayed enthusiasm over the beautiful new creations and the unmatched values in Summertime apparel that is "different."

There's no "plunder" in our stocks. Therefore we cannot give away merchandise. A glance at the appended Circus Specials for Friday and Saturday will prove that we have approached the "give away" point as closely as business prudence will permit. The price pruning is genuine, and to achieve this masterful bargain giving we have not resorted to the inflation of values to make low prices.

DEFENSE RESTS IN BECKER TRIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 21.—The defense in the Becker case unexpectedly rested at 10:53 a. m., after calling only one witness for direct examination. This was Harford T. Marshall, one of Becker's lawyers, who was questioned by Attorney Manton in an attempt to corroborate the alleged conspiracy framed up by Becker's accusers while they were held at the West Sde prison.

Marshalls's testimony helped to strengthen that given by Jacob Reich alias "Jack Sullivan" who was the chief witness called by the defense to prove that Becker was the victim of a "frame-up."

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 21.—Many of the standard issues were supplied at concessions at the opening of the stock market today and the declines ranged from inconsequential fractions to more than a point. During the first fifteen minutes the general price level ranged approximately ½ under Wednesday's finals, but at that time a firmer tone developed. Reading showed liquidation by the speculative element, declining ¾ and the same amount of loss was scored in Chesapeake & Ohio. Missouri Pacific continued under pressure, yielding ⅝ to 16⅛. Chino Copper fell 1½ while Amalgamated Copper and U. S. Steel Common each declined. Losses of ¼ were noted in Northern Pacific, Guggenheim Exploration, B. R. T. and American Smelting. New York, New Haven & Hartford lost ½ on its first transactions. Canadian Pacific started with a gain of ⅛ but soon lost it, declining beneath Wednesday's last price. The curb was steady. Americans in London were mixed on professional operations.

A firmer tone developed during the late forenoon with nearly all the active issues holding about steady. Missouri Pacific, however, was pressed, dropping ⅝ to 16. United States Steel Common was a shade lower. Reading advanced ¼. Amalgamated Copper sold around 72⅞. Other stocks unchanged. Call money loaning at 1¾.

2:30 p. m.—Stocks shaded in the last hour. Steel sold around 61¾ for a net loss of 1¼ on the day. Missouri Pacific sold down to 16¼ and pressure against Reading and Union Pacific caused fractional losses in both. The list showed a dragging tendency.

The New York stock closed steady; governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

SATURDAY GAME WITH MIDDLETOWN

Ulster will play its second home game Saturday with Middletown as visitors. The game will be played at McVey's field on account of the Odd Fellows' carnival at the athletic field. Ulster had no trouble in winning from the Middletown boys at the "Bug City" by the score of 8 to 3. They will fight hard to win Saturday and keep up the fine record which has been established. Thus far the home boys have won four out of five games played.

Just as the team was going along smoothly and hitting like demons, they struck a snag in the form of Tice, Newburgh's pitcher, who was very stingy with hits. This lowered Ulster's batting average from .376 to .315. Culloton, Webster and Peyer are still above the .400 mark, while Webster is the best base runner. Shultis is the only one who has a perfect fielding average.

Why Naval Uniforms Are Blue.

Naval uniforms all the world over pretty well are navy blue. The British fashion in this matter has been the rule with maritime people in general. That blue was ever selected for the king's naval service was a fortuitous happening. When in 1747 the question of uniform was being considered the color selected had very like to have been French gray laced with silver. While the king was still not quite decided he saw the Duchess of Bedford in a riding habit of blue faced with white and enlivened with gold lace. It was a revelation. Here, the king declared, was the uniform for his sea service officers, and no more was heard of French gray. The navy took to blue, and every other navy has taken to it since.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Fraternal Obligations.

"We will now take up our annual collection for the benefit of the heathen," announced the Rev. Dr. Fourthly at the close of his sermon, "and I hope those young men in the back seats who have been making so much noise all through this service will be especially liberal in their contributions. They are in duty and honor bound to help their brother heathens."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Submarine View.

"My," said the little mermaid, "what's the cause of all this commotion?"

"Oh," replied Neptune, with a smile, "it's merely an ocean greyhound chasing a couple of catboats."—Florida Times-Union.

A Sure Thing.

She—Did father say anything about you being too young? He—Well, yes, but he said I'd age pretty rapidly after we were married and I found I had to pay your bills.—Illustrated Bits.

He has hard work who has nothing to do.—Old Saying.

HABITS OF DUCKS AND GEESE

Average Egg Record of Former Is About Same as That of Hen—Drake Seldom Shows Temper.

Both ducks and geese begin laying in February. The duck's average egg record is about the same as that of a hen, but she yields her entire crop in about seven months, while the hen takes about nine months.

The goose averages about 30 eggs, and lays them in from three to four months.

Geese pair, but drakes will take care of four or more wives.

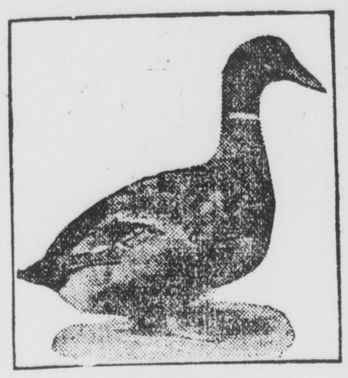

Eggs from yearling ducks hatch well, but geese must be about three years old to show strong fertility.

Ducks can be profitably bred for four years; geese can be bred for many years—for a period that seems incredible.

Ducks seldom become broody. Geese are apt to become broody after laying the first litter.

The goose is a grazing bird, while the ducks thrive with a limited amount of green food.

The goose, like the duck, has practically no crop. The drake is easily distinguished from the duck by the curl in the tail feathers. This feature is not found in the gander.

The average weight of the goose is twice that of the duck.

The older the gander the more vicious he is apt to become during breeding season; the drake seldom shows temper, being of a more timid nature.

Geese cannot be profitably hatched and reared artificially, while incubators and brooders have revolutionized the duck business.

Geese do not thrive when yarded; ducks do.

PREPARE EGGS FOR MARKET

Several Excellent Little Hints That Will Tend Greatly to Increase Profits From Poultry.

Provide clean, dry hay or straw or a suitable material for the nests, renew the material frequently and always when it becomes wet and soiled.

Collect eggs every day shortly before noon, or preferably at noon and at dusk. It is especially advisable when hens are broody to collect twice daily.

On no account should eggs which have been found by chance in nests in the open during harvest time or any other time be mixed with those intended for market. Any such eggs which are not fit for consumption should be thrown out.

Any dirt on the egg when it is collected should be removed by means of a dry cloth, or if that method fails a slightly dampened, but not a wet cloth, should be used. Do not wash hen eggs nor put them in water, nor use any chemical to remove the dirt.

Eggs should always be kept dry. Contact with wet material or exposture to moisture causes them to go bad quickly; therefore, eggs when taken to market should be protected from the wet by suitable coverings.

Keep eggs in a cool, dry place away from objectionable odors.

Reserve the small eggs for home and market the best and largest.

Put clean, dry hay in the basket or box used for packing eggs for market and pack carefully.

HEN WAS LACKING IN MILK

Amateur Farmer Awakened to Fact That His Chickens Must Be Fed in Order to Thrive.

During the first year the amateur farmer discovers that all his chickens which were confined in coops, were languishing at the point of death. The novelist went over his hen literature to locate the cause of his trouble, but to no avail. Finally he called upon a neighbor to whom he put the question: "What do you suppose is the matter with those chickens?" "Well, I dunno. What do you feed 'em?" "Feed them!" exclaimed the novelist farmer, "why I don't feed them anything." "Then how'd you suppose they were agoin' to live?" "I presumed," replied the literary person, "that the old hen had enough milk for them now."

Cause of Bad Eggs.

Carelessness in keeping the eggs intended for hatching purposes is a frequent cause of so-called ringed eggs and dead germs.

Change Feeding Places.

Change the feeding place of the chickens frequently. When fed on one spot of ground, the soil becomes contaminated and diseases are spread.

Lime for Poultry.

Lime for the poultry can be purchased in the form of oyster shells, though old plaster or dry cracked bones are fairly good.

Fewer Study for Ministry.

Statistics show that in the early days of American colleges about one-half the graduates adopted the ministry as a profession. At the present time only about five per cent of the college graduates become ministers.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 21.—Many of the standard issues were supplied at concessions at the opening of the stock market today and the declines ranged from inconsequential fractions to more than a point. During the first fifteen minutes the general price level ranged approximately ½ under Wednesday's finals, but at that time a firmer tone developed. Reading showed liquidation by the speculative element, declining ¾ and the same amount of loss was scored in Chesapeake & Ohio. Missouri Pacific continued under pressure, yielding ⅝ to 16⅛. Chino Copper fell 1½ while Amalgamated Copper and U. S. Steel Common each declined. Losses of ¼ were noted in Northern Pacific, Guggenheim Exploration, B. R. T. and American Smelting. New York, New Haven & Hartford lost ½ on its first transactions. Canadian Pacific started with a gain of ⅛ but soon lost it, declining beneath Wednesday's last price. The curb was steady. Americans in London were mixed on professional operations.

A firmer tone developed during the late forenoon with nearly all the active issues holding about steady. Missouri Pacific, however, was pressed, dropping ⅝ to 16. United States Steel Common was a shade lower. Reading advanced ¼. Amalgamated Copper sold around 72⅞. Other stocks unchanged. Call money loaning at 1¾.

2:30 p. m.—Stocks shaded in the last hour. Steel sold around 61¾ for a net loss of 1¼ on the day. Missouri Pacific sold down to 16¼ and pressure against Reading and Union Pacific caused fractional losses in both. The list showed a dragging tendency.

The New York stock closed steady; governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

SATURDAY GAME WITH MIDDLETOWN

Ulster will play its second home game Saturday with Middletown as visitors. The game will be played at McVey's field on account of the Odd Fellows' carnival at the athletic field. Ulster had no trouble in winning from the Middletown boys at the "Bug City" by the score of 8 to 3. They will fight hard to win Saturday and keep up the fine record which has been established. Thus far the home boys have won four out of five games played.

Just as the team was going along smoothly and hitting like demons, they struck a snag in the form of Tice, Newburgh's pitcher, who was very stingy with hits. This lowered Ulster's batting average from .376 to .315. Culloton, Webster and Peyer are still above the .400 mark, while Webster is the best base runner. Shultis is the only one who has a perfect fielding average.

Why Naval Uniforms Are Blue.

Naval uniforms all the world over pretty well are navy blue. The British fashion in this matter has been the rule with maritime people in general. That blue was ever selected for the king's naval service was a fortuitous happening. When in 1747 the question of uniform was being considered the color selected had very like to have been French gray laced with silver. While the king was still not quite decided he saw the Duchess of Bedford in a riding habit of blue faced with white and enlivened with gold lace. It was a revelation. Here, the king declared, was the uniform for his sea service officers, and no more was heard of French gray. The navy took to blue, and every other navy has taken to it since.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Fraternal Obligations.

"We will now take up our annual collection for the benefit of the heathen," announced the Rev. Dr. Fourthly at the close of his sermon, "and I hope those young men in the back seats who have been making so much noise all through this service will be especially liberal in their contributions. They are in duty and honor bound to help their brother heathens."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Submarine View.

"My," said the little mermaid, "what's the cause of all this commotion?"

"Oh," replied Neptune, with a smile, "it's merely an ocean greyhound chasing a couple of catboats."—Florida Times-Union.

HABITS OF DUCKS AND GEESE

Average Egg Record of Former Is About Same as That of Hen—Drake Seldom Shows Temper.

Both ducks and geese begin laying in February. The duck's average egg record is about the same as that of a hen, but she yields her entire crop in about seven months, while the hen takes about nine months.

The goose averages about 30 eggs, and lays them in from three to four months.

Geese pair, but drakes will take care of four or more wives.

Eggs from yearling ducks hatch well, but geese must be about three years old to show strong fertility.

Ducks can be profitably bred for four years; geese can be bred for many years—for a period that seems incredible.

Ducks seldom become broody. Geese are apt to become broody after laying the first litter.

The goose is a grazing bird, while the ducks thrive with a limited amount of green food.

The goose, like the duck, has practically no crop. The drake is easily distinguished from the duck by the curl in the tail feathers. This feature is not found in the gander.

The average weight of the goose is twice that of the duck.

The older the gander the more vicious he is apt to become during breeding season; the drake seldom shows temper, being of a more timid nature.

Geese cannot be profitably hatched and reared artificially, while incubators and brooders have revolutionized the duck business.

Geese do not thrive when yarded; ducks do.

PREPARE EGGS FOR MARKET

Several Excellent Little Hints That Will Tend Greatly to Increase Profits From Poultry.

Provide clean, dry hay or straw or a suitable material for the nests, renew the material frequently and always when it becomes wet and soiled.

Collect eggs every day shortly before noon, or preferably at noon and at dusk. It is especially advisable when hens are broody to collect twice daily.

On no account should eggs which have been found by chance in nests in the open during harvest time or any other time be mixed with those intended for market. Any such eggs which are not fit for consumption should be thrown out.

Any dirt on the egg when it is collected should be removed by means of a dry cloth, or if that method fails a slightly dampened, but not a wet cloth, should be used. Do not wash hen eggs nor put them in water, nor use any chemical to remove the dirt.

Eggs should always be kept dry. Contact with wet material or exposture to moisture causes them to go bad quickly; therefore, eggs when taken to market should be protected from the wet by suitable coverings.

Keep eggs in a cool, dry place away from objectionable odors.

Reserve the small eggs for home and market the best and largest.

Put clean, dry hay in the basket or box used for packing eggs for market and pack carefully.

HEN WAS LACKING IN MILK

Amateur Farmer Awakened to Fact That His Chickens Must Be Fed in Order to Thrive.

During the first year the amateur farmer discovers that all his chickens which were confined in coops, were languishing at the point of death. The novelist went over his hen literature to locate the cause of his trouble, but to no avail. Finally he called upon a neighbor to whom he put the question: "What do you suppose is the matter with those chickens?" "Well, I dunno. What do you feed 'em?" "Feed them!" exclaimed the novelist farmer, "why I don't feed them anything." "Then how'd you suppose they were agoin' to live?" "I presumed," replied the literary person, "that the old hen had enough milk for them now."

Cause of Bad Eggs.

Carelessness in keeping the eggs intended for hatching purposes is a frequent cause of so-called ringed eggs and dead germs.

Change Feeding Places.

Change the feeding place of the chickens frequently. When fed on one spot of ground, the soil becomes contaminated and diseases are spread.

Lime for Poultry.

Lime for the poultry can be purchased in the form of oyster shells, though old plaster or dry cracked bones are fairly good.

Fewer Study for Ministry.

Statistics show that in the early days of American colleges about one-half the graduates adopted the ministry as a profession. At the present time only about five per cent of the college graduates become ministers.

A Surprise

ou can't go on this coach," said the
t.
've got to go on this coach. There's other till tomorrow noon, and I've
to be in D. in twelve hours."
Nevertheless, you can't go!"
e turned away from me resolutely stalked into the office. The coach standing at the door, with six orses attached. I asked a lounger hen it would start, and he said it would probably not get off for an hour.
I determined to go on that coach. I ock out on the road in the direction stage would pursue, intending to few miles, then wait till it came trusting to a five dollar bill for er to take me on. I carried esolution, and when the coach
e asked the driver to pull up.
mothers within put their heads out
op by indows, as though they thought
d if ca was a holdup. I asked the t curd to take me on. To my surprise than I might get on if I liked, but uld advise me not to since it er an very probable the coach would made attacked by road agents.
gard was somewhat set back by this in-rmation, but I was bound to be in y the next morning and had no other ay of getting there. Pulling open he door, I climbed into the coach, the passengers looking at me as if they thought I was going through them for their valuables. There were two men and two women, one of the men wearing the white cravat of a clergyman,
the other being a quiet, meek looking little chap, with a high keyed voice.
This was in contrast with the women,
who were the queerest looking persons
I ever saw, both of them having voices rough enough for the driver of an ox team.

"Air y' armed, stranger?" asked one of the women.

"No," I replied, "I am not."

"I've got two guns. Y' kin have one on 'em if y' like."

"No, no!" said the clergyman. "Don't give him a gun. If we have a fight he'd start in before we're ready."

"I don't want a gun," I said. "I've lived in these parts five years and never have been in a holdup yet. I don't believe there's going to be any holdup. When road agents come down on a coach they don't tell people beforehand."

"Like enough," grunted one of the women.

I had been traveling nights and was tired out; so, resting my head against the cushion, I fell asleep.

I was awakened by the stopping of the coach and the flinging open of both doors. A man stood at each door with a short rifle, and one of them told us to stay where we were, not make any fuss and no one would be hurt. They didn't want our valuables, but they did want the treasure box. Notwithstanding this assurance the passengers seemed to be beside themselves with terror. The clergyman begged them not to kill him, the squeaky voiced man asked them to consider his wife and children, and both the women shrieked hoarsely.

The treasure box was taken off the boot and laid beside the road. Two men attended to that, and one of them was trying to get the cover off to make sure they were getting what they wanted.

The door guard on that side turned to see what they were doing when the man with the squeaky voice cried:

"Shoot!"

Quick as a flash one of the women raised a cocked revolver she had concealed under a fold of her dress and shot the door guard on her side dead. There was a simultaneous crack, and the other guard fell at the hands of the other woman. Before the men who were trying to open the treasure box could get their guns to bear both fell—one shot by the clergyman, the other by the squeaky voiced man. Then both the men jumped out of the coach and finished those who were only wounded.

While they were doing this the women were tearing off their dresses and flinging their ribbon bedecked hats on the floor, both appearing as stalwart men. Having divested themselves of their tawdry finery, they, too, left the coach and stood looking down upon their victims. I asked the clergyman what it all meant.

"It means," he said, "that this is Bill Owens' gang. That's Bill over there. They have been terrorizing this yere country for months. The sheriff—that's him over there"—pointing to the squeaky voiced man—"he organized this party to get rid of 'em. The express company arranged to send a big lot o' gold over the road and let it leak out that it would go by this coach. But that box hain't got no gold in it. It's full o' sand. In order to trap 'em we traveled as ordinary folks, two of our men making themselves fine ladies."

I saw it all except the fine ladies, who did not play the parts of women overwell. I failed to get to D. on that coach because it was not intended to go any farther than the meeting with the robbers and was now needed to take their bodies back to the starting point. So I said goodby to all and, when I saw them lumbering out of sight, started off to continue my journey on foot.

About sunset I found a house by the road, where I got some supper and succeeded in hiring the owner to drive me into D. the next morning. The news of the trapping of the robbers had preceded me, and my coming was looked upon with surprise. I told the story to gaping audiences.

WATER ALWAYS NECESSARY.

During the winter season of the year many farm animals do not receive as much water as they really need to give the best results, says the Kansas Farmer. This is especially true of hogs. In cold weather, when all water left in troughs or other receptacles is likely to freeze, the animals do not have the opportunity to drink as much as they otherwise would.

Professor Deitrich, formerly of the Illinois Agricultural college, found in conducting a series of experiments in feeding swine that a sufficient amount of water is a very important consideration in securing the largest returns from the feed consumed by hogs. He found that oftentimes in securing the best results in the feeding of hogs it was necessary to encourage the consummation of the proper amount of water by supplying some of the food in liquid form. Those who are feeding hogs through the winter season should bear in mind that the supplying of a source of pure, clean water at the proper temperature is of the greatest importance. Perhaps in many cases it will be desirable to supply a part of the water in the form of warm slop feeds. A feed cooker for the cooking of feeds has little economic importance, but such a device may be very useful in supplying warm liquid feeds during the cold season of the year.

THE DAIRY HOUSE.

Separate Building For Handling Milk Is Necessary.

In every case where a considerable portion of the farm income is derived from the sale of dairy products a building should be provided to be devoted exclusively to their care.

The essential features which should be retained in any plan are a room just large enough for the actual needs; a floor, wall and ceiling which can be easily, quickly and thoroughly cleaned; a good drain to carry away waste water; a suitable method for heating the house in cold weather; plenty of light and ventilation; convenient arrangements for washing, scalding and drying dairy utensils, and a good tank and water supply for cooling the milk or cream. The dairy house should be entirely separate from the milking [illegible] cannot be provided milk or cream should be handled and stored in a clean, light and well ventilated place, free from strong odors of any kind.—From Bulletin of Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station.

HIRED MAN LAW.

Controversies about wages frequently arise between farmers and their hired men when the latter are discharged or quit work before the expiration of the time for which they were employed. Sometimes a man who is hired to do certain specified work or work for a certain period of time for fixed wages quits his job without good and sufficient reasons, and the question then arises what compensation, if any, he can recover by law from his employer for the work he has actually done. There is some conflict of authority in the decisions of the courts upon this subject, but the weight of authority is to the effect that in such case the hired man can recover the value of the services which he actually rendered, deducting from this amount any damages which his employer has sustained by reason of his failure to complete the services which he was hired to perform. Sickness or death of an employee is considered by the law to be the act of God and constitutes good excuse for delay or even for nonperformance of a contract for personal services. An employee who is prevented by sickness from completing services according to his contract can recover the actual value of the services which he has performed under the contract, and if the completion of his work is prevented by his death his executor or administrator can recover the value of the services actually performed by him.

A Surprise

t.
've got to go on this coach. There's ther till tomorrow noon, and I've
to be in D. in twelve hours."
Nevertheless, you can't go!"
e turned away from me resolutely
stalked into the office. The coach standing at the door, with six rses attached. I asked a lounger
hen it would start, and he said it would probably not get off for an hour.
I determined to go on that coach. I ck out on the road in the direction stage would pursue, intending to
few miles, then wait till it came trusting to a five dollar bill for er to take me on. I carried
esolution, and when the coach
e asked the driver to pull up.
mothers within put their heads out
op by indows, as though they thought
d if ca was a holdup. I asked the t curd to take me on. To my surprise than I might get on if I liked, but
uld advise me not to since it
er anvery probable the coach would madeattacked by road agents.
ard was somewhat set back by this in-rmation, but I was bound to be in
, the next morning and had no other ay of getting there. Pulling open
he door, I climbed into the coach, the passengers looking at me as if they thought I was going through them for heir valuables. There were two men d two women, one of the men wear-ng the white cravat of a clergyman,
the other being a quiet, meek looking
little chap, with a high keyed voice.
This was in contrast with the women,
who were the queerest looking persons
I ever saw, both of them having voices
rough enough for the driver of an ox
team.

"Air y' armed, stranger?" asked one of the women.

"No," I replied, "I am not."

"I've got two guns. Y' kin have one on 'em if y' like."

"No, no!" said the clergyman. "Don't give him a gun. If we have a fight he'd start in before we're ready."

"I don't want a gun," I said. "I've lived in these parts five years and never have been in a holdup yet. I don't believe there's going to be any holdup. When road agents come down on a coach they don't tell people beforehand."

"Like enough," grunted one of the women.

I had been traveling nights and was tired out; so, resting my head against the cushion, I fell asleep. I awakened by the stopping of the coach and the flinging open of both doors. A man stood at each door with a short rifle, and one of them told us to stay where we were, not make any fuss and no one would be hurt. They didn't want our valuables, but they did want the treasure box. Notwithstanding this assurance the passengers seemed to be beside themselves with terror. The clergyman begged them not to kill him, the squeaky voiced man asked them to consider his wife and children, and both the women shrieked hoarsely.

The treasure box was taken off the boot and laid beside the road. Two men attended to that, and one of them was trying to get the cover off to make sure they were getting what they wanted. The door guard on that side turned to see what they were doing when the man with the squeaky voice cried:

"Shoot!"

Quick as a flash one of the women raised a cocked revolver she had concealed under a fold of her dress and shot the door guard on her side dead. There was a simultaneous crack, and the other guard fell at the hands of the other woman. Before the men who were trying to open the treasure box could get their guns to bear both fell—one shot by the clergyman, the other by the squeaky voiced man. Then both the men jumped out of the coach and finished those who were only wounded.

While they were doing this the women were tearing off their dresses and flinging their ribbon bedecked hats on the floor, both appearing as stalwart men. Having divested themselves of their tawdry finery, they, too, left the coach and stood looking down upon their victims. I asked the clergyman what it all meant.

"It means," he said, "that this is Bill Owens' gang. That's Bill over there. They have been terrorizing this yere country for months. The sheriff—that's him over there"—pointing to the squeaky voiced man—"he organized this party to get rid of 'em. The express company arranged to send a big lot o' gold over the road and let it leak out that it would go by this coach. But that box hain't got no gold in it. It's full o' sand. In order to trap 'em we traveled as ordinary folks, two of our men making themselves fine ladies."

I saw it all except the fine ladies, who did not play the parts of women overwell. I failed to get to D. on that coach because it was not intended to go any farther than the meeting with the robbers and was now needed to take their bodies back to the starting point. So I said goodby to all and, when I saw them lumbering out of sight, started off to continue my journey on foot.

About sunset I found a house by the road, where I got some supper and succeeded in hiring the owner to drive me into D. the next morning. The news of the trapping of the robbers had preceded me, and my coming was looked upon with surprise. I told the story to gaping audiences.

WATER ALWAYS NECESSARY.

During the winter season of the year many farm animals do not receive as much water as they really need to give the best results, says the Kansas Farmer. This is especially true of hogs. In cold weather, when all water left in troughs or other receptacles is likely to freeze, the animals do not have the opportunity to drink as much as they otherwise would.

Professor Deitrich, formerly of the Illinois Agricultural college, found in conducting a series of experiments in feeding swine that a sufficient amount of water is a very important consideration in securing the largest returns from the feed consumed by hogs. He found that oftentimes in securing the best results in the feeding of hogs it was necessary to encourage the consummation of the proper amount of water by supplying some of the food in liquid form. Those who are feeding hogs through the winter season should bear in mind that the supplying of a source of pure, clean water at the proper temperature is of the greatest importance. Perhaps in many cases it will be desirable to supply a part of the water in the form of warm slop feeds. A feed cooker for the cooking of feeds has little economic importance, but such a device may be very useful in supplying warm liquid feeds during the cold season of the year.

THE DAIRY HOUSE.

Separate Building For Handling Milk Is Necessary.

In every case where a considerable portion of the farm income is derived from the sale of dairy products a building should be provided to be devoted exclusively to their care.

The essential features which should be retained in any plan are a room just large enough for the actual needs; a floor, wall and ceiling which can be easily, quickly and thoroughly cleaned; a good drain to carry away waste water; a suitable method for heating the house in cold weather; plenty of light and ventilation; convenient arrangements for washing, scalding and drying dairy utensils, and a good tank and water supply for cooling the milk or cream. The dairy house should be entirely separate from the milking [illegible] cannot be provided, milk or cream should be handled and stored in a clean, light and well ventilated place, free from strong odors of any kind.—From Bulletin of Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station.

HIRED MAN LAW.

Controversies about wages frequently arise between farmers and their hired men when the latter are discharged or quit work before the expiration of the time for which they were employed. Sometimes a man who is hired to do certain specified work or work for a certain period of time for fixed wages quits his job without good and sufficient reasons, and the question then arises what compensation, if any, he can recover by law from his employer for the work he has actually done. There is some conflict of authority in the decisions of the courts upon this subject, but the weight of authority is to the effect that in such case the hired man can recover the value of the services which he actually rendered, deducting from this amount any damages which his employer has sustained by reason of his failure to complete the services which he was hired to perform. Sickness or death of an employee is considered by the law to be the act of God and constitutes good excuse for delay or even for nonperformance of a contract for personal services. An employee who is prevented by sickness from completing services according to his contract can recover the actual value of the services which he has performed under the contract, and if the completion of his work is prevented by his death his executor or administrator can recover the value of the services actually performed by him.

Subject to the use thereof as a right of way or private road granted by Charles H. Roberts and wife to Philip Herman by deed dated Oct. 30, 1871, and recorded in Ulster County Clerk's office Dec. 12, 1871, in Book 173 of deeds, page 412, and also subject to the use thereof as a right of way or private road by the owners of parcels No. 4 and 6 as hereinbefore described.

Parcel 12.

All that piece or parcel of land which in a deed from Isaac C. B. Ransom to Charles H. Roberts, dated Feb. 7, 1887, and recorded in the Ulster County Clerk's office Feb. 9, 1887, in Book 268 of deeds, page 525 is described as follows:

All that tract or parcel of land situate in the town of Lloyd, county of Ulster and State of New York, bounded on the north by lands of the said party of the first part; on the east by lands of Solomon D. Relyea and on the south by lands of Solomon D. Relyea and Ira Shaffer and on the west by lands of Ira Shaffer. It being a strip of land forty-two feet wide on the north and running to a point on the south and being three hundred and twenty feet in length.

Together with all the right, title and interest in and to the right of way conveyed by said deed.

And each of said parcels will be struck off to the highest bidder therefor; such sale, however, to be conditioned on the whole amount bid on such sale thereof in twelve parcels after deducting the expenses of surveying the same, being greater than the amount bid at the sale of said premises in two parcels as hereinbefore provided.

If the amount bid upon the sale of said premises in two parcels is greater than the aggregate amount bid upon a sale of said premises in twelve parcels, after deducting the expenses of surveying the same, the referee will then finally strike off said premises to the person or persons who were the highest bidder for the same, upon the sale thereof in two parcels, and he or they shall be deemed the purchaser thereof.

If the aggregate amount bid for said premises upon a sale thereof in twelve parcels, after deducting the expense of surveying the same, is greater than the amount bid upon the sale of the said premises in two parcels, the referee shall then finally strike off said premises to the person or persons who were the highest bidders respectively therefor on the sale in twelve parcels.

HUGE LINER HAD LIVELY LANDING

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 21.—The new Hamburg-American liner Vaterland, the greatest ship afloat, became unmanageable today when she attempted to dock at the company's piers at Hoboken. The tugs that were guiding her were pulled about like infants by a giant and the vessel had to be taken a mile down the Hudson river to prevent her smashing into the pier.

Twenty-one powerful tugs were attached by lines to the Vaterland and they had to work for upwards of an hour before the giantess was snug in her slip.

There was a strong ebb-tide flowing as Captain Hans Reusser brought the big liner's nose near the head of her dock. The current cut the ship broadside and she was swept toward the center of the Hudson river. Whistles screeched a warning to river traffic and ferry boats and tugs scurried out of the way.

The engines on the big ship were started and when her propellors began to churn the liner was able to work her way back to her pier without any difficulty, but here the tedious task of warping her into her slip took much time and patience.

France and the Frenchman.

The French are probably the most patriotic people in the world. The average half educated Frenchman is firmly persuaded that his country is an oasis of civilization surrounded with illimitable stretches of barbarism. This is what he believes, but his courtesy prevents him from being offensive about it. In his estimation the rest of the world simply does not count. He knows that there are other parts of the world, but they are not worth his while to visit or to inquire about. That is why the Frenchman rarely travels and never emigrates. He will ask you with surprise why he should travel, seeing that he is already in France and that he has no taste for savages or wild beasts. And as for its government, it is notoriously the best in the world, with a future so glorious as to defy the imagination. He will say all this with a disarming charm. He pities you for being a foreigner, but he does not hate you on that account, for, of course, you cannot help it.—Argonaut.

Colors and Tints.

Colors are mixed as follows to obtain tints:

For brown mix red and black.
For purple mix white, blue and lake.
For pink mix white and carmine.
For silver gray mix indigo and lampblack.
For lead color mix white and lampblack.
For dark green mix light green and black.
For pea green mix white and green.
For brilliant green mix white and emerald green.
For orange mix red and yellow.
For pearl gray mix white, blue and black.
For flesh color mix white, lake and vermilion.
For drab mix umber, white and venetian.
For cream mix white, yellow and venetian.
For olive mix red, blue and black.
For buff mix yellow and a little venetian.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Human Hair Traffic.

The trade in human hair is a big industry. Italians easily take the lead in this traffic, the main source of their supply being obtained from the peasant women of Italy, Dalmatia and Switzerland. Several times a year these human hair merchants send their agents around to collect supplies, which are usually immense, for hair growing is cultivated on a very large scale by these women and yields a good remuneration to the producer. Two crops of hair a year and looking none the worse for the loss is not extraordinary among the peasant women. Half the hair at the back of the head is shorn off, the remaining half being drawn over the exposed part and dressed in such a manner as only to be detected on very close scrutiny and by those experienced in the trade.

Conscience.

Ever present and operant is that which never becomes a party in one's guilt, conceives never an evil thought, consents never to an unrighteous deed, never sins, but holds itself impeccable, immutable, personally holy—the conscience—counselor, comforter, judge and executor of the spirit's decrees. None can flee from the spirit's presence nor hide from himself. The reserved powers are the mighty ones. Side by side sleep the whispering sisters and the Eumenides. Nor is conscience appeased till the sentence is pronounced. There is an oracle in the breast, an unsleeping police, and ever the court sits, dealing doom or deliverance. Our sole inheritance is our deeds. While remorse stirs the sinner there remains hope of his redemption.—Alcott.

Soldier's Most Trying Position.

The average soldier finds the most terrifying position to be that of standing motionless in the front rank, exposed to the enemy's fire without being able to reply. The order to advance or to charge with fixed bayonets is then received as a release from agony. Movement, to greater peril, distracts the mind and greatly reduces the mental anguish.

AN ACT to amend the highway law, in relation to county roads.

Became a law March 21, 1914, with the approval of the Governor. Passed, three-fifths being present.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Chapter thirty of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, entitled "An act relating to highways, constituting chapter twenty-five of the consolidated laws," is hereby amended by adding thereto, after section three hundred and twenty, a new section, to be section three hundred and twenty-a, to read as follows:

§ 320-a. County system of roads. The board of supervisors of a county may provide for the construction or improvement of a highway or section thereof, in one or more towns of the county at the joint expense of the county and town or towns, and may prepare a map of a definite system of county roads for the county for such improvement.

The board may by resolution direct the county superintendent to supervise the preparation of grade and culvert work of a road, so designated by said map for improvement, by the town superintendent of the town in which such improvement shall be made, and upon the completion thereof by the town, and the county superintendent's certification that the road is so prepared and that the town is equipped with sufficient machinery to properly perform the work, such machinery to be furnished by the town and used during the roads construction, the board may direct the construction of an improved road under the direction of a committee known as the highway officials of the county as hereinafter provided. The construction work shall be under the charge and supervision of the town superintendent of the town in which the work is being done. If for any cause the town superintendent is incapacitated or in the opinion of the county superintendent is incompetent to properly take charge of the work, some competent person shall be designated by the county superintendent by and with the advice and consent of the town board and the compensation of the town superintendent or person in charge shall be a town charge.

The employment of convict labor on roads so constructed shall be authorized and permitted, in the discretion of the superintendent of state prisons, upon the requisition of the county superintendent of highways.

The highway officials of the county under this section shall consist of the county superintendent, three members of the board, appointed by the chairman. The supervisor of the town in which a road is being improved shall be a member of the said committee on all questions involving the work in the town of which he is the supervisor.

Unless the advice and directions of the highway officials shall be followed in the prosecution of the work, no liability therefor shall accrue to the county for its share of the cost of work.

The cost of such improvement other than that apportioned to the towns shall be a county charge. The amount of the cost of such improvement so to be borne by the county shall be levied and collected as a county charge and paid in to the county treasurer. The resolution of the board of supervisors providing for the construction or improvement of such highway, may authorize the county treasurer of the county or the supervisors of the respective towns to borrow money on the faith and credit of the county or of such towns to pay the portion of the cost of such construction or improvement to be borne respectively by the county or such town or towns. Such resolution may also provide for the issue and sale of such bonds and shall conform so far as may be with the provisions of this chapter, relating to a resolution authorizing a town to borrow money for highway purposes. Payments therefrom shall be made from time to time by the county treasurer upon the certificate of the district or county superintendent countersigned by the chairman of the highway officials committee. Said orders shall be drawn to the order of the supervisor of the respective towns where roads are being constructed to be disbursed by them, upon the orders of the town superintendent or person designated in his stead, in the same manner as highway disbursements are now made and provided for, under the town highway bureau of the highway department.

Such highways, when completed and accepted by the board of supervisors, shall be thereafter repaired and maintained at the sole expense of the towns in which they are located, unless the board of supervisors shall apportion a share of the expense thereof upon the county.

CHAP. 61.

AN ACT to amend the highway law, in relation to county roads.

Became a law March 21, 1914, with the approval of the Governor. Passed, three-fifths being present.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Chapter thirty of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, entitled "An act relating to highways, constituting chapter twenty-five of the consolidated laws," is hereby amended by adding thereto, after section three hundred and twenty, a new section, to be section three hundred and twenty-a, to read as follows:

§ 320-a. County system of roads. The board of supervisors of a county may provide for the construction or improvement of a highway or section thereof, in one or more towns of the county at the joint expense of the county and town or towns, and may prepare a map of a definite system of county roads for the county for such improvement.

The board may by resolution direct the county superintendent to supervise the preparation of grade and culvert work of a road, so designated by said map for improvement, by the town superintendent of the town in which such improvement shall be made, and upon the completion thereof by the town, and the county superintendent's certification that the road is so prepared and that the town is equipped with sufficient machinery to properly perform the work, such machinery to be furnished by the town and used during the roads construction, the board may direct the construction of an improved road under the direction of a committee known as the highway officials of the county as hereinafter provided. The construction work shall be under the charge and supervision of the town superintendent of the town in which the work is being done. If for any cause the town superintendent is incapacitated or in the opinion of the county superintendent is incompetent to properly take charge of the work, some competent person shall be designated by the county superintendent by and with the advice and consent of the town board and the compensation of the town superintendent or person in charge shall be a town charge.

The employment of convict labor on roads so constructed shall be authorized and permitted, in the discretion of the superintendent of state prisons, upon the requisition of the county superintendent of highways.

The highway officials of the county under this section shall consist of the county superintendent, three members of the board, appointed by the chairman. The supervisor of the town in which a road is being improved shall be a member of the said committee on all questions involving the work in the town of which he is the supervisor.

Unless the advice and directions of the highway officials shall be followed in the prosecution of the work, no liability therefor shall accrue to the county for its share of the cost of work.

The cost of such improvement other than that apportioned to the towns shall be a county charge. The amount of the cost of such improvement so to be borne by the county shall be levied and collected as a county charge and paid in to the county treasurer. The resolution of the board of supervisors providing for the construction or improvement of such highway, may authorize the county treasurer of the county or the supervisors of the respective towns to borrow money on the faith and credit of the county or of such towns to pay the portion of the cost of such construction or improvement to be borne respectively by the county or such town or towns. Such resolution may also provide for the issue and sale of such bonds and shall conform so far as may be with the provisions of this chapter, relating to a resolution authorizing a town to borrow money for highway purposes. Payments therefrom shall be made from time to time by the county treasurer upon the certificate of the district or county superintendent countersigned by the chairman of the highway officials committee. Said orders shall be drawn to the order of the supervisor of the respective towns where roads are being constructed to be disbursed by them, upon the orders of the town superintendent or person designated in his stead, in the same manner as highway disbursements are now made and provided for, under the town highway bureau of the highway department.

Such highways, when completed and accepted by the board of supervisors, shall be thereafter repaired and maintained at the sole expense of the towns in which they are located, unless the board of supervisors shall apportion a share of the expense thereof upon the county.

§ 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, May 21.—Leach Cross, the pugilistic New York dentist, has performed a very creditable "comeback" in a financial way ever since he was knocked down for the full count by Wall Street three years ago.

Leach, by practicing frugality, and by holding up fight promoters for the near-limit of their bank rolls, managed to gather about $30,000 unto himself by the year A. D. 1910. And then some "friend" got an audience with Leach and told him how easy it would be for him to take that $30,000 down to Wall Street, leave it linger there for a few months, and then bring it back with anything from $100,000 to $1,000,000 in addition.

"And, like a boob, I went," says Leach. "I stuck around Wall Street for a few months while those fellows monkeyed with my money and when I decided it was time that I got back my $30,000 and the profits, I was told that there wasn't any profits and that the $30,000 had evaporated.

"Gee, that was a wallop—the hardest I ever got in my life. It took all the courage and ambition out of me for a time, and I didn't care what came or went. It seemed pretty tough to have a bunch of crooks take away all the money you've spent many years in saving. And the worst of it, just at the time I felt pretty poor physically. It seemed doubtful if I could ever make good in the ring again."

But Cross has "made good" since. He's "come back" with a vengeance and shown himself to be a better fighter and a bigger drawing card than he was six or seven years ago. In the last two years he has grabbed off matches with top-notchers, and in each and every one of these batties he has collected a big purse.

When Cross turned in his income tax blanks some months ago he gave $28,000 as the figure for his annual earnings during the year previous. Of course, a few thousand of this was made through his side issue business of plugging teeth, but about $25,000 came from plugging the other fellows.

"I guess I've got about $50,000 laid aside now," said Cross some months ago. "And you can take it from me that it's laid aside—those Wall Street wolves won't get it. They don't play fair—they don't play a man's game. They lure you into their net like a spider does a fly, and then they choke every dollar out of you."

"Sunny Jim" Coffroth of San Francisco, who is making more money in promoting fights than any other man in the country, says the secret of success in the fight promotion business is to "give the public a square deal."

And out on the coast that's exactly what Coffroth gives the fans. He doesn't boost his "bleacher" prices for the star bouts and thus freeze out the fellows who can afford only $1 or $2. Those prices always remain the same, no matter what the attraction.

"The $1 and $2 boxes are the ones that help me make ends meet when I'm staging just an ordinary bout," says Coffroth. "Those boys are my friends and you can bet on it that I have made it an ironclad rule never to increase the price of their seats. Whether it's just an ordinary scrap or one in which the championship is at stake, the prices are the same."

* * * *

Coffroth, although always a fight fan, never gave the promoting end of the game a thought until back in 1900. Just about that time the Horton fight law was repealed in New York state and Jim Kennedy, a New York fight promoter, landed in 'Frisco looking around for a site for an arena. He sought out Coffroth, who then was secretary to the supreme court in that city.

"The game ought to make money out here if I can get a permit," said Kennedy.

"I'll get the permit if you'll take me into partnership with you," said Coffroth.

"You're on," answered Kennedy. And Coffroth has been "on" ever since.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Sandwich, Eng., May 21.—The American golfers' invasion of England has failed. Only two representatives of the U. S. remained in the British amateur championship tournament today when play began in the fourth round and both were beaten. The British stars have gained revenge for their many defeats by Americans in the world of sports and will now fight alone for their golf championship.

Ten Americans entered for the British championship but this number decreased daily until the last stars of the United States were Charles W. Evans, Jr., of Chicago and Harold Weber of Toledo.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, May 21.—Leach Cross, the pugilistic New York dentist, has performed a very creditable "comeback" in a financial way ever since he was knocked down for the full count by Wall Street three years ago.

Leach, by practicing frugality, and by holding up fight promoters for the near-limit of their bank rolls, managed to gather about $30,000 unto himself by the year A. D. 1910. And then some "friend" got an audience with Leach and told him how easy it would be for him to take that $30,000 down to Wall Street, leave it linger there for a few months, and then bring it back with anything from $100,000 to $1,000,000 in addition.

"And, like a boob, I went," says Leach. "I stuck around Wall Street for a few months while those fellows monkeyed with my money and when I decided it was time that I got back my $30,000 and the profits, I was told that there wasn't any profits and that the $30,000 had evaporated.

"Gee, that was a wallop—the hardest I ever got in my life. It took all the courage and ambition out of me for a time, and I didn't care what came or went. It seemed pretty tough to have a bunch of crooks take away all the money you've spent many years in saving. And the worst of it, just at the time I felt pretty poor physically. It seemed doubtful if I could ever make good in the ring again."

But Cross has "made good" since. He's "come back" with a vengeance and shown himself to be a better fighter and a bigger drawing card than he was six or seven years ago. In the last two years he has grabbed off matches with top-notchers, and in each and every one of these batties he has collected a big purse.

They don't play fair—they don't play a man's game. They lure you into their net like a spider does a fly, and then they choke every dollar out of you."

Absent-minded plays at the Polo Grounds in New York are excusable today. President Farrell of the Yankees is host to a flock of chorus girls this afternoon.

A Piano for the June Bride

There is nothing that for desirability and appropriateness surpasses the Piano as a June bridal gift. Any one of the splendid instruments on our main floor would be warmly appreciated and at the same time reflect the artistic taste of the donor.

Or, if for economic reasons, a slightly used Piano is preferred, we have several which would baffle the skill of an expert to distinguish them from new. These we offer at price-concessions that are extremely liberal. If you intend making a Piano gift, come here first and profit.
